LYNN foundling girl baby, in arms of nurse at the maternity home.

ASKS THAT BABY BE NAMED MARY

"Please call it Mary. Such is the wish of an unfortunate mother."

A mother in Lynn placed her girl child, scarce three days old, in a suitcase, a sheet to fend her against the chill and a scribbled scrap of paper to take the place of a mother's love and care, under the window of the home of Mrs. Sarah J. Webber at No. 98 Green street.

It is only by remembering how many things a mother longs to do for her child that one can sense the trag-

FRAME-UP IS DENIED BY ANGELL

The Finance Commission's letter to Mayor Curley pointing out "suspicious circumstances" in connection with the tearing down of the old probate building by Contractor Marks Angell was today the big sensation in political circles.

Mayor Curley called the letter "Guerilla warfare." Mr. Angell admitted that he is "close to the Mayor," but denied that the job was "framed" in his favor.

The Finance Commission found that when the building was sold at auction, the bidders were told they would have to do the work in a twenty-day period, and would have to remove all debris. The commission found that these conditions were not enforced upon Mr. Angell. And the commission found:

"That the twenty-day condition

He was born at Smorgen, Russia.

He came to the United States a poor boy when seventeen and settled in Boston.

He is married and has four daughters, one married.

The Boston Directory for 1914 gives his address as No. 89 Ruthven street, Roxbury, the heart of the Tammany stronghold in Ward 17, but he recently moved to Grenville street, Dorchester, Ward 24.

He is a licensed junk dealer, and has been twenty years.

He does a business under the name of the Roxbury Iron & Metal Company.

He has a ten-acre inclosure and a storehouse for second-hand material and old metal on Granite avenue, Neponset, with wharf facilities on the Neponset river.

He has a garage and two or three automobiles at his plant.

He has a branch at No. 10 Mall street, Roxbury, and another at No. 1044 Harrison avenue, according to the directory.

He has long been known as Mayor Curley's political friend and boomer.

He has actively supported Mayor Curley in his campaigns for various offices.

He has a half-dozen or more pictures of the Mayor in his Neponset office, one an oil painting over his desk, another taking the oath of office with the Stars and Stripes as a frame, another with Curley handling a gavel, and several other smaller ones between pictures of President Wilson and Champ Clark.

Angell first won newspaper fame when he bought for junk the old pipe organ when the Vine Street Church was razed to give place to the Roxbury Municipal Building.

BUNKER HILL CREW ACCUSED

Returning passengers of the steamer Bunker Hill, which was rammed last night by the steam yacht Vanadis, killing two and injuring a score or more, today made grave charges against the crew and the management of the Metropolitan line. The charges are being investigated.

Many claim that members of the crew, and particularly colored waiters and porters, showed disregard of the passengers and even thrust women aside in their efforts to gain places of safety. They also claim no members of the crew were detailed to give orders or to assist in manning the lifeboats.

LIFEBOATS HARD TO MOVE.

It is also alleged the lifeboats themselves were not quickly available for use. Boston people who were on board say they were so securely fastened that it was almost impossible for any one, especially landsmen, to cast them loose without assistance.

If the ship had been really sinking, as was feared, they say a horrible loss of life would have followed, owing to the impossibility of launching enough boats in time.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell was a passenger, occupying stateroom 234, which was completely obliterated. He had just left it, on the invitation of Charles Russell of Gloucester, when the crash came. When he arrived in Boston today Mr. O'Connell said:

"The crew did not do anything. The passengers tried to man the lifeboats alone and without help because there was no one around to give orders or to assist. The boats apparently had never been used. It was hard work to move them. They were so securely lashed it was almost impossible to swing them out. There was no order and no discipline. In the dining room when the crash came almost every waiter in the room rushed for the door, crowding the passengers down into the steward's department, in their efforts to get away."

Many of the passengers expressed themselves as being highly indignant at the way these waiters acted.

STORIES OF PASSENGERS.

One passenger, J. W. A. Crowley, said that he saw some of the crew running about the deck for life pre-

DORSEY OPPOSES CLEMENCY

By International News Service.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 14.—When the hearing before Governor Slaton for the commuting of the death sentence imposed upon Leo M. Frank was resumed today, Solicitor-General Hugh E. Dorsey began his argument opposing clemency.

Governor Slaton today planned to visit the National Pencil Company factory with representatives of the State and the defense to familiarize himself with the surroundings in which Mary Phagan was murdered.

Because of the nearness of the date fixed for Frank's execution, June 22, Governor Slaton, Solicitor-General Dorsey and the defense counsel spent Sunday going over the case.

A mass meeting attended by [illegible] persons was held on the capitol steps in the afternoon protesting against the commuting of Frank's sentence. In the crowd were more than 100 women.

British Steamers Collide Off Egypt

PORT SAID, Egypt, June 14.—The British steamships Radnorshire and Dawlish collided off Newport Roads today while carrying war supplies and both were badly damaged. The Dawlish caught fire and was beached. The Radnorshire, although holed underneath the waterline, was able to make port. Three seamen on the Dawlish were injured.

OUR FLAG STANDS TODAY, as it has ever stood, for individual liberty and equality before the law, for interstate and international righteousness, for civilization and for peace.

IT REPRESENTS a union of sovereign and independent States that substitute in their relations with one another, law for war, the Golden Rule for the greed of aggression, the reign of reason for the reign of force.

ON THIS ANNIVERSARY DAY, therefore, let the Stars and Stripes be lovingly and thankfully displayed on every public place, workshop and private dwelling, and let it be saluted with a pledge of fidelity by every citizen, young and old.—From Governor Walsh's proclamation announcing today as Flag Day in Massachusetts.

President Makes Flag Day Speech at Washington

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Tribute today was paid to the flag by official and resident Washington at various flag day exercises. President Wilson delivered the principal address of the day from the south portico of the Treasury building, where the central observance took place.

A chorus made up of [illegible] players sang patriotic songs while the Marine Band played national anthems. At the Treasury Department exercises were held in the large courtyard. A feature of the program was the unfurling of the great American flag, rated the largest in the world, which was let down from the roof of the building.

HOUSE HAS FAINT HOPE OF PEACE

NEW YORK, June 14.—"There is no sign or hint of peace in Europe," is the report which Colonel E. M. House, personal representative of President Wilson, brought back to his chief yesterday on his return on the steamship St. Paul from a three months' stay abroad. So carefully was the British government to guard the messages Colonel House was reported to be carrying that the St. Paul was convoyed 300 miles by torpedo boat destroyers.

It was understood when Colonel House left upon his mission that he had been especially commissioned by the President to sound out the European chancelleries on the outlook for peace. If opportunity presented he was authorized to renew the President's offer of mediation.

"I saw no sign of peace," said Colonel House to an AMERICAN reporter last night at the residence of Gordon Auchincloss, his son-in-law, at Roslyn, L. I. "Furthermore, I don't believe there is any man in England, France or Germany who could say with accuracy when peace will come. One man's guess is as good as another's. So far as my observation went, the peoples of the various warring countries were just as determined continuing the struggle as ever."

DELAY IN REPLY TO WILSON

By International News Service.

BERLIN, June 14.—The German Foreign Office in an official statement published today in the Lokal Anzeiger announces that it will be weeks before the German government can give its answer to the second American note relative to submarine warfare.

"The second reply will be an answer touching on many points involved in the negotiations, that it will be necessary to collect evidence from many different sources," says the statement. "It will take considerable time to get together all the material necessary for the reply and it will be weeks before Germany's answer can be given."

A plain division of opinion is noticeable in the press, some of the newspapers adopting a milder tone toward the United States than others.

"The question now is to find a modus vivendi satisfactory to both parties," says the Tageblatt.

"This much is certain: Without [illegible] satisfactory [illegible] be obtained. If the United States in dealing with the question [illegible] a modus vivendi can be found which gives justice to all [illegible] then it will [illegible] to attain a satisfactory [illegible] neutrality [illegible] than bad news [illegible]. We are firm in [illegible] that the relations between Germany and the United States [illegible] to complete [illegible] righteousness [illegible]."

[illegible] Anzeiger and the [illegible] agree that the latest American note exhibits no sharpness [illegible] is friendly in spirit toward [illegible] and will afford an opportunity for further negotiations.

"President Wilson's note was more [illegible] than the English and [illegible] had expected," said the Kreuzzeitung.

"[illegible] which Mr. Bryan preached [illegible] President Wilson's note, but America must also show [illegible] respect for Germany's sacred rights."

HOUSE FINDS NO HOPE FOR PEACE

London they were regarded as of such importance by the British authorities that when the liner St. Paul carrying Colonel House sailed from Liverpool, the British Admiralty sent a special convoy of two destroyers which accompanied the liner for 100 miles through the war zone.

Colonel House declined to make any explanation as to the reasons for the precautions taken for his safety and the haste shown in getting him ashore. Smiling blandly, the Texan said:

DENIES HE TALKED PEACE.

"I have no report for the President. I have sent no report to him since I came ashore, and so far as going to Washington to make a report is concerned, I do not contemplate going for several days, if I go at all."

Colonel House was asked the nature of his mission.

"Purely personal," he replied. "I go abroad on this same trip every year. I was not sent by the President and I did not talk peace while I was away. I doubt if I made use of the word peace once during my trip. I did visit Germany, France and England, as well as Switzerland, and I had talks with officials in all these countries. But they were all officials who have long been friends of mine, and the subjects of our talks were of a private character not at all suggested by the President. I talked to them on my own behalf exclusively."

Colonel House denied he had been called home by President Wilson, and replying to a question as to reports made during his absence he said:

"It would be the duty of any American citizen abroad to report any matter of importance that came to his notice. Moreover, President Wilson is my personal friend."

Colonel House left America on the Lusitania on January 30. He visited England for two weeks, and during his stay there he admitted yesterday he had talks with Premier Asquith, David Lloyd George and Lord Kitchener. From London he went to Paris, where he had interviews with President Poincare and Minister of Foreign Affairs Delcasse. At Berlin he talked with Von Jagow, Foreign Minister, Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg, Under Secretary of State Zimmermann and some lesser officials.

"My reasons for talking with these gentlemen," said he, "had nothing to do with peace. I know them all and always visit them. In Berlin and everywhere else I was treated nicely."

"I left Berlin before the President's note on the Lusitania was received. In fact, I was in London when the Lusitania was sunk. As to criticism in Germany with regard to supplies of ammunition, etc., from America, I saw and heard nothing I should not see or hear, and I have no opinions to express. I heard of Mr. Bryan's resignation on the steamer coming over. I must beg to be excused from expressing any opinion on that also."

CONCERNING BRYAN.

It was suggested to Colonel House that his name had been mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Bryan. He smiled.

"It has not been offered to me," he said. "I have never held public office or desired it."

Returning again to the subject of peace, Colonel House, replying to a query as to the possible length of the war, said:

"You know as well as I do, or as well as Sir Edward Grey, or Delcasse, or Von Jagow. In all countries I visited there is a strong spirit of confidence as to an outcome of the war favorable to the side the particular people favor. But I gathered that the people generally are tired of the war."

ASKS THAT BABY BE CALLED MARY

edy of this mother who could do so little. A suit case—a sheet—and this note.

"Please call it Mary. Such is the wish of an unfortunate mother."

The girl baby fell into kindly hands. The police believe she had slept all night in the suit case under the window. When Mrs. Webber opened the suit case, a tiny, reedy voice greeted her in a tiny, baby demand for attention.

A little later, the child was safe and happy in the Lynn Maternity Home. A few days it will stay there—waiting for the mother to repent, to reclaim it.

If she does not, the State will take it in hand, and when—ten or a dozen years hence—the child asks: "Why don't I have a papa and a mamma like other boys and girls?" why, the older folks will only shake their heads. Children, they will intimate, cannot understand.

Unless, of course, some childless man and woman with the mother-and-father heart should take the baby in.

If they do they will remember the tragic scribble:

"Please call it Mary. Such is the wish of an unfortunate mother."

2 KILLED ON THE BUNKER HILL

servers until told by Captain Holmes that there was no danger.

H. Leslie Wiencke of Jersey City declared that while women passengers were fainting he saw four employes on the boat running toward a lifeboat and putting on life preservers as they ran.

Charles C. Baron of Boston was dining when the crash came.

"The entire side of the dining room was stove in," he said. "Employes told us there were life preservers on the upper deck and while they talked they were putting life-preservers on themselves."

E. E. Gerstam of New York was indignant over what he termed "contemptible action" on the part of certain of the dining-room employes "who put on life preservers while making no effort to give any assistance to passengers."

Passengers on the Bunker Hill, which put back to New York with a gaping hole in her port side just abaft the beam, are convinced that four or five passengers were either knocked overboard or jumped when the sharp prow of the yacht ripped through the stateroom walls of the liner.

John J. Brown, a salesman of Cambridge, was one of these. He was rescued by the crew of the yacht, but died of his injuries after being hauled out of the water. Some others are reported to have been rescued from the water. Those passengers who were on deck, however, are certain that of those who went overboard, some were not rescued.

Stories of passengers and crew in New York today show remarkable escapes by some of the survivors.

George H. Kendrick, president of the Massachusetts Packing & Belting Company, was in the stateroom where the yacht struck. The bowsprit and stem of the steam yacht ploughed through the walls, crushing Kendrick in his berth.

W. H. Danks, pysical director of the Wakefield Y. M. C. A., climbed down to the stateroom through the wreckage and extricated Kendrick, who was just alive. He died almost immediately.

The Bunker Hill, with about 250 passengers aboard, was just off Hunts Point, about twenty-three miles out, when a dense fog shut in. Speed was reduced, according to passengers.

But a short time after the Bunker Hill ran into the fog bank, the yacht loomed off the port side, crashing head on, cutting her way into the steamer's side.

Several passengers were either jarred overboard or leaped. One deck hand was swept over. The greatest excitement prevailed. There were about seventy women and men in the dining-room when the broken spar of the yacht's bowsprit ripped, crashing and tearing, into the saloon.

Wireless calls were at once sent out by the Bunker Hill. Tugs and other craft were hurrying to her assistance when more messages reported the passenger boat as all tight below the waterline and able to make New York unassisted.

The big stem of the yacht ploughed through the rows of staterooms into the dining saloon, see[illegible] to rebound a bit and then [illegible] ahead again. It finally w[illegible] mass of wreckage, and th[illegible] blotted from sight in the [illegible]

About twenty-five staterooms were demolished. Steel beams and plates were sheared and twisted and woodwork splintered. The first impact sheared into the stateroom No. 250, in which Kendricks was. In the adjoining stateroom was ex-Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston and C. W. Hastings of Palmer.

They escaped narrowly. Miss May Wightman and Miss Alice Bell were on deck. They were caught in the wreckage, knocked down and dragged several feet.

TURKS BOMBARD ALLIES' POSITION

By International News Service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 14.—A successful bombardment of the Anglo-French positions on the Gallipoli peninsula was carried on by the Turkish batteries on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles throughout Sunday, says an official statement issued by the War Office today. It follows:

"During the night of June 11-12 attacks of the enemy against our right wing were repulsed with heavy losses and the allies had to fall back to their original positions. On Saturday morning the enemy batteries at Avi Burnu fired a great many shells, but these did not have the least effect. Our Anatolian batteries successfully bombarded the enemy's positions Sunday."

BATTLE IN EAST ON 750-MILE FRONT

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 14.—Fighting, ranging from outpost skirmishing to mighty engagements involving hundreds of thousands of men and many big guns, is going on over a great battle line 750 miles long in the eastern theatre of war.

At some points along this gigantic battlefront which stretches from the Baltic to the frontier of Bukowina, the Germans are upon the offensive and at others, the Russians have assumed the offensive and are driving the Austro-German armies before them with heavy losses.

It is officially estimated by the Russian War Office, that Germany now has 142 divisions in the field.

(Note—A German infantry division normally consists of 12,000 foot soldiers together with artillery and other units bringing its total strength up to about 20,000 men. According to the Russian figures it is estimated that the Germans have 2,840,000 men upon both battle fronts.)

Balked in their drive against Lemberg from the south, the Germans are now attacking with great violence the Russian positions along the San river. It is officially announced that the Russian losses have been light in the fighting along the Dniester, which checked the drive of the Austro-German army of General von Linsengen.

The following official statement dealing with the strength of the German forces and the Russian operations in Galicia was issued today:

"We suffered comparatively small losses in our recent offensive movements upon the Dniester. It has been noticeable in all our campaigns that our losses have been smaller when we were upon the offensive than when on the defensive, with our entrenchments exposed to the concentrated fire of the heavy guns of the enemy.

"The main body of the enemy's army, which broke through our front near Stryj, moved on to Zurawno. The forests on the left bank of the Dniester at this point prevented us from using our artillery to prevent the Austro-German forces from crossing the river. The same forests, however, proved valuable to us later, for, when the Austro-German army crossed the river the wooded country compelled it to break up into isolated detachments and the co-operation between the infantry and artillery was thus lost.

"At the beginning of the war the Germans on the two fronts had ninety-two infantry divisions, composed of four regiments each. By increasing these forces by ulterior formations the Germans brought their total strength up to 141 divisions. This probably exhausted the possibilities of increasing the Germany infantry. Among the so-called new divisions were many that merely consisted of parts of old units that had been cut up. The distribution of these divisions along the two fronts has been carried on by the German General Staff in a fluctuating manner.

"Following out its plan in the early days of the war, about six of the original forces of the Germans invaded Belgium and France. The defeat inflicted upon the Germans on the Marne in France, together with the menace of our invasion of East Prussia and the defeat of the Austrians in Galicia, forced the Germans to change their plans and undertake the transportation of heavy forces to the Eastern front.

"The intensity of the struggle, which is becoming greater in the west as well as in the east, has necessitated the introduction of fresh troops on the part of Germany and Austria, but it is evident that their sources are not inexhaustible.

"The enemy find before them unshakable confidence on the part of the allies' armies, supported by ever-growing strength of men and war materials. The facts cited above augur well for the future success of the allies, a success which will be attained by common efforts and common sacrifices together with mutual esteem founded upon complete and absolute union."

MISS BURR CALLS ATROCITY TALK JUST EVIL GOSSIP

Miss Elsie P. Burr of Milton, who defends Germans against charges of atrocities in Belgium.

Miss Elsie P. Burr, a member of the Vincent Club and the daughter of I. Tucker Burr, the Boston banker who has just returned to her home in Milton after spending two months among the Belgian refugees, asks Americans to suspend judgment on the Germans in the matter of atrocities until the noise of battle has died down.

She declares that there is no doubt that most of the talk of atrocities is merely evil gossip.

In a statement to the public she says:

"I asked every refugee from either Belgium or the north of France with whom I came in contact, during a couple of months' work among them, if he or she had been an eye witness to any atrocity.

"A woman to whom I made this remark said: 'We Belgians pray that America will stay out of the war. If you go in, who will feed Belgium, who will maintain these hostels for the refugees. Our only hope is to be kept alive by America during this terrible time, until we can return to our country and build it up again.'

"There is no doubt that most of this talk of atrocities was evil gossip, and many of the refugees acknowledge it. It seems to them that German's intrusion on their personal property and peaceful industry is atrocious in itself. Has not a man the right to shoot any one who comes into his house with the intent to rob and to kill, and can a Belgian be blamed for any feelings of wrath and revenge he harbors against a nation with such an intent? But is it not the duty of the United States to suspend her verdict until the noise of battle has died down, and the Belgians, once again masters of their feeling and their country, can tell us how much is truth and how much exaggeration?"

AUSTRIA DENOUNCES ITALY FOR "ATROCIOUS TREACHERY" IN ENTERING WAR AGAINST HER

Following is the Austrian Red Book, the reply to the Italian Green Book, printed exclusively today in the Boston AMERICAN. The Boston AMERICAN printed the Italian Green Book exclusively on May 21.

Special Cable to the Boston American

THE HAGUE, June 12.—The Austrian Red Book, in reply to Italy's Green Book, which gave the causes leading up to the declaration of war by the Government of King Victor, has been translated and was made public today. It is as follows:

When Serbia's many years of intrigues became known to all the world in the most cruel manner through the Serajevo murder, and Austria-Hungary decided to demand solid guarantees of Serbia against a continuation of the intrigues on the monarchy, they might justly expect action. This was recognized as fully justified.

No European power might be expected to suffer the vicious provocations, the deliberate encouragement of secession of frontier districts and unscrupulous complicity in criminal plots and conspiracies against her security and integrity without using the most energetic means for prevention.

No more might objections be made against the form of Austria's complaint.

It was a difference in the mutual relations of the dual monarchy and an independent state.

Despite the statement that the very was one of local conflict, Austria did not attack Serbia's sovereignty and territorial integrity or use the welcome pretext to execute the long desired plan of [illegible] her.

RESPONSIBILITY IS PLACED ON RUSSIA.

The Alliance and Entente, since decades the foundation of European politics, proved beforehand that Russia, through unjustified intervention in the controversy between the Dual Monarchy and Serbia, saw the gravest consequences which would provoke a general conflict, for no doubt was possible that the German empire, fully recognizing the justice of our complaint against Serbia, would not fail to keep her promised word or deviate from the path indicated by her own interests, but assist her long-years ally with all her power against Russian attack.

Thereby France also would be drawn in, after decades of waiting for opportunity to execute her plans of revenge, and it might also be expected that England, though recently denying the existence of binding agreements with the two other Entente powers, would take part in the war against her envied and feared rival, the rapidly rising German Empire.

Finally, also it might be expected that Turkey, though feeling the after-effects of the recent Balkan war, and recognizing that Russian victory must mean the end of her independence, would take sides with the central powers.

ITALY CONDEMNED FOR NOT AIDING AUSTRIA.

What was Italy's position toward this threatening European war on the central powers whom she had to thank for three decades of security, peace, undisturbed development of economic power and gain of two extensive trans-Mediterranean provinces almost without an effort? One might expect she would assist her two allies in the war they had not provoked against two or more powers, Article 3 of the Triple Alliance saying: "If one or two of the allied powers, without direct provocation be attacked by two or more powers non-signatory to this treaty and become involved in war, this must be considered a casus foederis to all parties to this treaty."

"It was evident that Austrian intervention, which must follow after years of unexampled love, peace and patience was in no wise provocative of the attack that came from Russia deciding to use Serbia as a striking board against the Dual Monarchy and execute her extensive plans. Nevertheless, indications were that Italy did not intend to keep her promise in word or in spirit, but enter the war on the Allies' side. Though absolute fulfillment of her duties was not to be expected from Italy, Austria and Germany might at least suppose that Italy would keep benevolent neutrality and not assist the Allies.

"The enormous war evolutions and events justified at first this supposition. Nothing at the war's beginning gave to suppose the atrocious treason and breach of faith that Italy was later to commit.

"According to the Italian premier, after utterances by the Marquis San Giuliano, in August it was decided that Italy would remain neutral.

"Italy complained that Austria had omitted to consult Italy in accordance with Article 7 of the alliance. Austria accepted Italian neutrality without protest though maintaining that Article 7 was not applicable.

DESCRIBES ITALY'S OPPORTUNIST DEMAND.

The change in Italy's policy became clear when the ministry of foreign affairs, after Giuliano's death, passed into Sonnino's hands.

Beginning with November, events in Italy showed the dominant idea, without considering treaty obligations or moral scruples. Italy was sure of her opportunity when both allies were engaged in a gigantic struggle with mighty adversaries to force Austria to cede her southern districts, populated by Italians, and if necessary compel her to do so.

The first step in this direction was taken by the Roman cabinet when, on December 11, openly referring to national aspirations, it instructed Italy's ambassador to state that any military operations in Serbia, according to article 7 of the Triple Alliance, entitled her to demand compensation for military operations in foreign territory.

It is evident that compensations Italy could be looked for where the advantages for which must be equalized, that is in the Balkan peninsula. Nobody when the alliance was formed thought he renounced these districts. Moreover, on February 8, Austria made a counter demand, because Italy occupied the Aegean Islands and Valona.

CONCESSIONS OFFERED BY AUSTRIA.

Italy declared that, after long and fruitless negotiations, at the end of February she would consider as pending our operations would lead compensation. The [illegible] of the Alliance treaty was [illegible] in the most serious consequences. Such demeanor was the only possible basis of the proposal of the cession of Austro-Hungarian territories.

The situation was now clear. Austria found difficulty in familiarizing herself with the idea of surrendering without a fight the districts which four centuries had been under the Hapsburg sceptre and formed a natural wall of protection.

The extraordinary situation demanded an extraordinary decision. Baron Burian could therefore with his monarch give his approval and inform the Italian ambassador that Austria-Hungary would accept the principle of cession of part of the territory as a basis of negotiations. But before they began, the Roman cabinet demanded that the cession come into force immediately. The demand which was made in itself shed grave light upon the sincerity of Italy's intention to reach a solution.

Aside from the practical difficulties, Austria might justly not be expected to cede districts of greatest strategic importance before the conclusion of peace, when Italy's counter obligation of neutrality would be fulfilled. There truly was no reason for such an extraordinary faith in Italian loyalty.

Austria showed the impossibility of accepting those conditions, but was ready to give the strongest guarantees that the districts would be turned over after the conclusion of peace. Interruption of negotiations would have followed had the parties not agreed temporarily to leave this question open. The progress of the discussion of the matter itself, the outlines of the district to be ceded and other concessions Austria made in her suggestions which on March 27 were handed to the Italian ambassador at Vienna. This in reality offered the cession of almost the entire Italian speaking part of South Tyrol, while Italy should guarantee absolute benevolent neutrality and give Austria full freedom in the Balkans in the duration of the war.

COUNTER PROPOSALS CALLED EXORBITANT.

The Italian cabinet made objections to the general nature, was apparently not interested in the progress of the negotiations, and only when urgently requested brought forward counter propositions on April 10 in Vienna. These were so exorbitant as to give the impression that the Salandra cabinet had no earnest desire for peaceful arrangement with Austria. Italy's demands were really monstrous, including the cession of the entire Italian speaking Tyrol, the purely German district of Bozen, the lower as well as the Slav upper Isonzo Valley, the Goerz-Gradisca districts to the Nabresina strip, Carinthia, the thoroughly Slav islands of Lissa, Lessina and others, Trieste and its districts be made an independent state, recognition of Italian souvereignty in Valona, Austrian absolute disinterest in Albania, and the immediate carrying into effect of the cession of the territories.

The structure of this program proves the ideas underlying it. It was not national motive, but strategical viewpoints of aggressive character that decided the outline of the territories to be ceded. The fact alone that Italy made a series of demands vitally affecting the Dual Monarchy's most vital interest, gives reason to suppose that Rome secretly determined in any case to break with the central powers, whether the solution be peaceable or not, and join the Entente.

Austria at all points was inclined to make concessions and virtually conceded, to reach a compromise, many points intrinsically opposed to the Dual Monarchy's vital interests. No compromise was possible, the more so as the Roman Cabinet characteristically upheld particularly these demands. While negotiations continued with the greatest readiness for concession on Austria's part, Salandra, without even replying to our submitted proposition, on May 4, declared in Vienna that he considered the Alliance treaty broken by us, therefore Italy was entitled to withdraw all her propositions and again possess full freedom of action.

AUSTRIA'S FINAL CONCESSIONS.

Austria did not consider it proper to act immediately, but continued her efforts to reach a friendly understanding with Italy, going as far as possible when considering with the Dual Monarchy's most vital interests the last offer, which was submitted in writing to the Italian government by the Imperial ambassador, as well as by Von Buelow, included the following points: The cession of the Italian part of southern Tyrol, the cession of the district west of Isonzo, inhabited by Italians, founding a university in Trieste, and making the city an imperial free city; revision of the statutes giving it autonomy and guaranteeing the city's Italian character and maintenence, and eventually the enlargement of the free port of the district; the readiness to recognize Italy's absolute sovereignty in Valona and the surrounding district and the political disinterest of Austro-Hungary in Albania.

"When the proceedings of the Italian parliament excited the populace it clearly proved Italy's firm decision to entirely break off from her allies of so many years by treacherously attacking them in the back.

The Austria-Hungarian government on May 21 considered the moment had come to reply to the Italian government's latest note of May 4, to prove the absolute emptiness of the Italian pretexts and decline the responsibility for all consequences resulting from Italy's breach of the Alliance.

A few days later the Italian ambassador at Vienna handed the Imperial Government a declaration of war, whose lack of foundation sounds as a confession of weakness to its own cause.

DOCUMENTS AND LETTERS IN AUSTRIA'S SUPPORT

Documents and letters in support of Austria's position are included in the Red Book. They follow:

"Article 4 of the Triple Alliance treaty reads verbatim: 'If a great power not signatory to this treaty should threaten the political security of one of the high contracting parties and the latter is thereby obliged to declare war, the other two signatories bind themselves to observe benevolent neutrality towards his ally, each reserving the right to enter the war when he considers it desirable in order to make common cause with his ally.' each reserving the right to enter the war when he considers it desirable in order to make common cause with his ally.'

"Article 7 reads:

"'Austria-Hungary and Italy having in view merely to preserve as far as possible the territorial status quo in the near east, bind themselves to use their influence to prevent any territorial change prejudicial to one or the other signatories. For this purpose they will mutually give all information tending to enlighten their own intentions and those of each of the Powers.

"'Should, however, the case occur that in the course of events the maintenance of the status quo in the Balkans or Ottoman coasts, the Islands in the Adriatic or the Aegean, be impossible, and through the action of a third power or otherwise, Austria or Italy be obliged themselves to alter the status quo by temporary or permanent occupation, this occupation must take place only after previous arrangement between both powers, based on the principle of mutual compensation for all advantages, territorial or otherwise, accruing to each beyond the present status quo and satisfying the interests and just demands of both parties.'

TELEGRAM TO JOSEF FROM ITALY'S KING.

Telegram from the King of Italy to his Imperial Apostolic Majesty:

"Rome, Aug. 2, 1914.

"I have received your majesty's telegram. I need not assure your majesty that Italy, which has made every possible effort to maintain peace and which will do everything within its power to assist the earliest possible re-establishment of peace, will preserve cordial, friendly feelings toward her ally in accordance with the Triple Alliance and with sincere feelings that loyal interests are to be safeguarded.

(Signed)

"VITTORIO EMANUELE."

Count Berchtold to Herr von Merey:

"Vienna, August 4, 1914—Analogous with Marquis San Giuliano's statements to your excellency, the Italian ambassador by order today informed me that Italy regarding Albania, would remain loyal to her agreements with Austria-Hungary and decisions of the London conference. Italy will in no manner take advantage of the fact that Austria-Hungary is now occupied elsewhere.

"Italy also on every point, no matter what may happen later, will preserve this position. The Italian Minister at Durazzo has received the order to issue very stern warnings in this respect to the consuls under him.

"I beg your excellency to inform Marquis San Guiliano, I note this action with special satisfaction, however, a priori convinced that Italy will respect our agreement as we, on our part did during the Libyan campaign."

Telegram from Berchtold to Baron Von Macchioko:

"Vienna, August 25, 1914.

"I authorize Your Excellency simultaneously with your German colleague, to inform the Roman cabinet we accept the Italian interpretation regarding 'expression dans les regions des balcons.' We accept article seven without reservation not only during the present crisis, but for the entire duration of the alliance treaty.

"'This statement means we are prepared to enter pourparlers with Italy regarding the question of compensation in case of temporary seizure of any district in the Balkans.'"

AUSTRIA'S STATEMENT ON FINAL BREAK.

Statement from the Imperial Royal Government to the Royal Italian Government through the Imperial Royal Foreign Minister to the Royal Italian Ambassador:

"Vienna, May 21, 1915.

"The Austro-Hungarian minister of Foreign Affairs has had the honor to receive a statement concerning the abnegation of the Triple Alliance which the Italian ambassador made to him on behalf of the Royal Italian government, May 4, and with painful surprise the Imperial Royal government has received the announcement of the Italian government's decision abruptly to terminate a treaty founded on our mutually most important interests which for so many years has given our States security and peace, and has rendered Italy noteworthy services.

"The surprise is the more justified as the facts on which the Royal government bases its decision, go back over the nine months and as the Royal government has since then repeatedly expressed its wish to maintain the treaty relations between our countries and even strengthen them, a wish which has always met favorable and cordial response in Austria-Hungary. The reasons compelling the Imperial Royal government to send its ultimatum to Serbia in July last are too well known to repeat here.

"The aim which Austria-Hungary set herself, consisting solely in protecting the monarchy from Serbia's revolutionary machinations and preventing a continuation of an agitation aiming at the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary and resulting in the serious attempts ending with the horrible deed at Serajevo, could in no wise affect Italy's interests. The Imperial Royal government never supposed that Italy's interests might be associated with the criminal activities directed against Austria-Hungary's safety and territorial integrity, but which unfortunately was connived at and encouraged by the Belgrade government.

RUSSIA FORCED AUSTRIA TO ACT, IT IS SAID.

"The Italian government, besides, had been informed and knew that Austria-Hungary had no intention of conquest of new territory. It was expressly stated to Rome that Austria-Hungary, if the war remained local, had no intention to assail Serbia's territorial integrity or sovereignty."

When, as the result of Russian intervention, a mere local conflict between Austria and Serbia against our wishes became European and Austria-Hungary and Germany found themselves attacked by several great powers, the royal government announced Italy's neutrality. It is sufficient to the declarations made by Marquis San Guiliano and the telegram sent August 2, 1914, by His Majesty, the King of Italy, to His Majesty, the Emperor and King, to prove that the royal government then saw nothing in Austria-Hungary's actions contrary to the obligations of our alliance. Attacked by the powers of the triple entente, Austria-Hungary and Germany must defend their territories, but this defensive war has nothing to do with a program opposed to a realization of Italy's most vital interests.

These vital interests, or what we know of them, were in no manner threatened. If Italy, however, felt worried in this respect, she ought to have complained to Vienna and Berlin. Both undoubtedly were ready and inclined to safeguard these interests.

The royal government then held the opinion that their allies, as matters were, had no right to revoke treaty obligations, but she made to us a statement justifying the belief that she considered Austria-Hungary's action "an open breach of the word and spirit of the alliance treaty."

The Cabinets at Vienna and Berlin loyally accepted Italy's view though it regretted a decision which, according to our opinion, was not in accordance with the alliance's spirit. The exchange of opinions which then took place confirmed the full continuance of the Triple Alliance. Invoking this alliance, however, particularly article seven, the royal government made demands for certain compensations in case Austria-Hungary derived an advantage, territorial or otherwise, in the Balkan peninsula from the war.

The imperial royal government accepted this standpoint and declared itself ready to submit the question to discussion, simultaneously asserting the difficulty of deciding compensations as long as it was uncertain what advantage Austria-Hungary might derive from the war.

The royal government shared this opinion, a fact evident, as well from the late Marquis San Guiliano's statement August 25, 1914, saying:

"It is yet premature to speak of compensations, as from the Duke of Avara's remark after our retreat from Serbia: 'Now is no season for compensations.'"

AUSTRIA'S CONSTANT READINESS TO AGREE.

The imperial royal government has always been ready to enter pourparlers for this purpose. The imperial royal government, attributing the greatest importance to the maintenance of friendly relations with Italy, therefore, accepted negotiations when the Italian government again brought forward certain demands concerning the cession of integral parts of the monarchy as compensation to Italy, though in our opinion Article 7 never referred to territories forming part of the contracting powers, but merely to the Balkan peninsula.

During these pourparlers on this question, the Imperial Royal government has always been guided by a sincere wish to reach an agreement with Italy. When for ethical, politcal and military reasons Rome made it impossible to accede to all the demands of the Royal government, still the Imperial Royal government was ready to make sacrifices so important that they were only justified by the wish to continue the alliance which existed for many years, to the mutual advantage of both countries.

The Royal government points to the fact that Austrian concessions were only to become effective at an uncertain time, to wit, the end of the war, thus apparently indicating thereby they had lost all value. Though the Imperial government emphasized the material impossibility of immediate surrender of ceded territories, it still declared herself willing to offer all the necessary guarantees to prepare for the surrender within the shortest time.

The Imperial Royal government's apparent good will and spirit of conciliation is shown throughout the negotiations. It has no wish to justify the Italian government's views that all hope of agreement is excluded. Such an agreement, however, is possible only when both sides are sincere and wish harmony.

The Imperial Royal government cannot accept the Italian government's declaration that it wishes full freedom of action and of its intention to consider the treaty with Austria-Hungary null and void, as this declaration is plainly in contradiction of solemn obligations accepted by Italy December 5, 1912, stipulating the duration of the alliance to July 8, 1920, after one year's previous notice. No provision is made for the cancellation of the treaty before that time.

Now when the Royal Italian government arbitrarily cuts loose from all obligations, the Imperial Royal government refuses to take the responsibility for all consequences arising from this.

The Red Book concludes with the Italian ambassador's declaration of war, dated Vienna, May 23, 1915. The translation was revised and confirmed by the secretary of the Austrian legation at The Hague.

"FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A." NO. 1

George Washington—"Father of His Country"

EVERY AMERICAN knows that without "Immortal Washington our National Independence would have been impossible. Few, however, know that the greatest battle of Washington's life was fought to secure for his countrymen the Constitution of the United States. Almost immediately after the Revolution it seemed that all the great sacrifice of blood and treasure had been in vain. The original thirteen states refused to work in harmony, either in spirit or in law. The new Republic was tottering to its foundations. At this critical period in American history the most brilliant men of each state met in convention and unanimously elected Washington as President—undoubtedly the most momentous gathering of the kind the world has ever known. Here he displayed as great ability as law-maker as he had as a warrior. For months the Fathers of the Republic labored, and finally adopted our present National Law, which forever guarantees Religious, Commercial and Personal Liberty. This was in 1787. Seventy years later Anheuser-Busch established their great institution upon the tenets of the Federal law which Washington did so much to create. Like all of the great men of his time, he was a moderate user of good old barley brews. For three generations Anheuser-Busch have brewed honest malt and hop beers. To-day 7500 people are daily employed to keep pace with the ever-increasing public demand. The great popularity of their famous brand—BUDWEISER—due to quality purity, mildness and exquisite flavor, has made its sales exceed those of any other beer by millions of bottles.

Discuss Sermon of Rev. Dr. Myers

Tremont Temple parishoners are discussing today the sermon of the Rev. Cortland Myers on the sinking of the Lusitania.

"One of the foulest things that ever came out of the pit of hell," is the expression used by the Rev. Mr. Myers in referring to the sinking of the Lusitania.

"I can't be neutral. I don't like people who are neutral in the face of that foul deed. Not because Germany did it. If either England or France or Russia had done it I would feel the same," he said.

Stagnant Blood Given A Quick Impulse

Wonderful Activity Imparted by a Famous Remedy.

The appearance of pimples, boils, skin eruptions and all evidence of impure blood calls for S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. Cathartics, purges, bowel movers and laxatives won't do.

No amount of bile will destroy certain germs which cause blood and skin eruptions. They are away down deep in the tissues, perhaps in the very marrow of the bones. And such a condition calls for the searching influence of S. S. S. It is indeed a remarkable remedy, since it is taken up by the blood stream and never loses its medical influence. On and on it goes, through and through the entire system and always with the same definite action to dislodge germs, destroy their activity and stimulate the liver, lungs, kidneys, bowels and skin to throw them out completely.

It stimulates stagnant blood, provides a rational exhilaration to the nerve centers and thereby the natural functions of the body are aroused to cast out intruders, no matter how strongly intrenched they may be. It refutes the ancient theory that to destroy within us the germs that eat into our vitals calls for drugs that destroy our very existence. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist and for special advice on severe blood disorders write at once to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 108 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Do not accept a substitute. # ANGELL DENIES 'FRAME-UP' IN RAZING OF PROBATE BUILDING was announced with no intention of requiring the successful bidder to live up to it, but with the intention of preventing genuine competition.

"That the terms stated by the auctioneer * * * warrant the belief that the sale * * * was made without proper competition, and that Marks Angell alone of all the bidders knew that he would not be compelled to live up to the conditions of the sale."

Mayor Curley in reply to the charges said:

CLUTCHING AT STRAWS.

"The commission is like a drowning man clutching at straws in its eagerness to criticise rather than to prevent failures.

"The extension of time over the twenty-day limit was allowed because the plans for the new building were not ready. Such an extension would have been allowed any contractor.

"The demolition of the City Hall annex cost the city $2,000. The demolition of this building, on the contrary, has brought in to the city $1,550.

"The guerilla warfare of the commission seems designed to impair the efficiency of the heads of departments and to discredit the city. The object of the law which created the commission is being defeated by the commission's deliberately adopted scheme of cheap political strategy."

Marks Angell had this to say:

"The charge that this contract was 'framed' for me is a blanked lie.

"The building was sold at public auction, with a bonus if it were torn down in twenty days.

"I bid against a combine that was there to buy it. The combine intended to pay $300 for the building. I put their bid up to $1,000. They raised that to $1,400. I made it $1,550, and got the building.

"It cost over $3,000 to tear the building down.

"I want it understood that Mayor Curley is not interested in my business. You'll see on my wagons 'M. Angell, proprietor.' That's right. I'm M. Angell, and I'm the proprietor."

SAVED THE CITY MONEY.

"I'll admit I'm close to the Mayor. I'm his friend and his voter. I was with him in his first political fight and I've been with him ever since in victory and defeat.

"In buying this building I saved the city money. But for me the city would have received only $300.

"But the Fin Com isn't out to 'get' me. You know who they're out to 'get.'"

Here are some passages from the Finance Commission's letter to the Mayor, attacking the transaction:

"The Finance Commission has made an investigation of certain suspicious circumstances connected with the sale and tearing down of the old probate building. It reports as follows:

"On the day of the sale the building was [illegible]. In announcing the terms of the sale, the auctioneer, Edward W. Foye, stated that the successful bidder would be required to start the work of tearing down the building within five days after the sale and to complete it within twenty working days, and that the successful bidder would be required to remove all of the material and dirt from the location.

"Work on the building commenced about March 9, that is, within the time stipulated by the auctioneer, but progressed slowly and was not finished until June 5, 1915, two months after the work was supposed to have been done. At the present time neither the foundation wall nor the debris has been removed.

"Although Mr. Angell paid $1,550 to the auctioneer the day of the sale, the latter did not make a return of it to the city until two months later, and then only after he received a communication from the city collecting department that the Finance Commission was inquiring the reason for the non-payment of the money to the city.

"Mr. Angell upon being examined admitted that a day and night gang would have had to work on the building to tear it down within the time specified, and that if he had been compelled to live up to the twenty-day condition he would have demanded $1,800 for the job of tearing down the building, including the materials in it, instead of paying $1,550 for those materials, a difference by his own admission of $3,350 in his favor.

PREVENTED OTHER BIDS.

"Thomas A. Elston and John F. [illegible] of the firm of Elston & Company stated that the twenty-day clause within which time the building was to be removed prevented them and other building wreckers from bidding at the auction sale.

"David Grossman of the New England Contracting Company said he bid up to $1,500, but felt that a higher figure would not be safe for him under the conditions of the auctioneer's proposal. He stated he was prepared to bid $2,000 or $2,500 for the whole building under other conditions."

"A further suspicious circumstance connected with the stipulation that only twenty days would be allowed to tear down the building is in the fact that on all the evidence it is apparent that it was known to the Public Buildings Department officials at the time of the sale that the architect's plans for the new building would not be ready before June 1, three months after the auction sale. As a fact the plans will not be ready before July 1.

"The Finance Commission finds:

"1—That the twenty-day condition was announced at the time of the sale with no intention of requiring the successful bidder to live up to it, but with the intention of preventing genuine competition.

"2—That no written contract was made between Swift-McNutt company and the city of Boston, as stated in the bond, and that the assignment of Marks Angell's contract to the Swift-McNutt Company never received the assent of the city of Boston.

"3—That whereas the bond purports to guarantee a written contract, and whereas there was in fact no written contract, therefore the bond of Swift-McNutt Company, accepted by the public buildings department, is of doubtful value.

"4—That the oral contract has not been complied with as regards the removal of the foundation walls and the debris.

What Mayor Curley Thinks of Fin. Com.

Cheap political strategy.
Guerilla warfare.
Without any sense of decency.
Designed to discredit the city.
Intended to impair efficiency.
Like a drowning man grasping at straws.
Eager to criticise rather than to prevent failures.

CAR STRIKE STOPS CHICAGO SERVICE

By International News Service.

CHICAGO, June 14.—For the first time in a generation street transportation in Chicago was completely tied up today. Not a wheel was turned on the surface and elevated lines after 4 o'clock this morning, and more than one million persons employed in the loop district were forced to find some other means of transit.

The strike of the car men, who are demanding more pay and improved working conditions, was officially called at midnight, but the last car was not run into the barns until an hour later. The order called out 14,000 conductors, motormen and elevated guards.

Chicago today had more than 18,000 union workers on strike and a total of nearly 200,000 unionists were idle as the result of strikes and lockouts.

Every known method of transportation was made use of today. Bicycles were in large demand and hundreds of pairs of roller skates were sold to persons who had no other way to reach their places of employment. Every taxicab and horse-drawn vehicle was called into service and many private automobiles were run for profit. Thousands of workers walked miles. To add to their discomfort was a heavy rainfall.

In an official order signed by President William Quinlan of the Surface Men's Union and President John J. Bruce of the Elevated employes' organization all of the members of the unions were warned to stay out of saloons and to refrain from drinking. They were also ordered to commit no act of violence that would discredit their organization.

Mayor Thompson in a statement expressed hope that arbitration of the difficulties between the men and their employers would be agreed upon at an early date. He offered to select the arbitrators and said: "I will stake my reputation that any choice of members of the arbitration board, if I am permitted to select them, would give both parties a square deal and an honest adjustment of their differences."

NURSE A SUICIDE IN THE STREET

In the presence of her sweetheart and with a revolver [illegible] him, Molly A. Clohessy, twenty years old, of Charlestown, shot herself through the head while standing in the middle of [illegible] street, East Lexington, about midnight.

Louis A. Boutin, of No. 17 [illegible] street, Cambridge, the sweetheart, who was with her, was arrested by the police, but later released, when a note addressed to relatives was found on the body declaring the girl [illegible] as if she would be with her mother.

Miss Clohessy, who was employed as a nurse maid in the family of James J. Walsh of Lexington, accompanied by Boutin attended a moving picture show in Boston during the evening. Boutin said she acted strangely while with him.

As they neared the Walsh house on the way home she asked Boutin to leave her. When he was but a few steps away he heard shots and turning around found the girl already dead.

Thinking Boutin had murdered the girl, [illegible] Dudley, a bystander, grabbed him and turned him over to the police. He was later released.

Boutin is seventeen years old and lives at No. 17 Clay street, Cambridge. He is a carpenter and son of Jean Boutin. Today he told the story of the tragedy. He said:

"Molly has not been herself for about three months. Last night we went to a moving picture show and reached Lexington about 11:30. We walked up Main street. When suddenly Molly said: 'You better leave me now. I want to join my mother.' As her mother died in Ireland some time ago I was surprised at her words. I started to leave, but had gone only a few steps when I heard her shots, and when I turned around she was lying on the ground.

"I was trying to help her when I was arrested. I don't remember what happened after that. To make matters worse I gave her the revolver. About three months ago she said she was afraid of tramps, so I gave her a 32-calibre revolver with two cartridges in it and showed her how to use it."

Nellie Clohessy of No. 41 Austin street, Charlestown, a sister of the dead girl, is employed at the same place. She said today:

"I can't explain the suicide unless it is that Molly was a little too religious. Our mother died some time ago and since then Molly has said she wanted to join her."

Wants Drug Cure for Deer Island

In the annual report of the Watch and Ward Society, which is being distributed today, Dr. Frank Chase, secretary of the society, says: "Probably the most important single piece of investigation performed by agents of the society concerned the conditions at Deer Island with respect to the use of habit forming drugs taken to the House of Correction." After giving details of the information secured, he recommends that a large compound be established on the island [illegible] of a drug expert [illegible] the habitual users of drugs.

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company

BARCLAY and Stillitoe were very much disturbed, and Mary Blackstone was so furious with jealousy that she succeeded in making [illegible], who was with her when she read the paper, furious and jealous, too. But he kept this to himself.

Mary was not only angry with Tommy and Celestia, but she was angry with herself.

"It was in my power," she thought, "to pull that minx's claws. Tommy brought her here, and I refused to take her in. I was a fool. It's natural enough that in a surrounding of common laboring girls she should shine out like a superior being. She's good looking; there's no doubt about that. And she's probably got a magnetic voice, and knows how to roll her eyes and make men feel sorry for her.

"And so she's made a fool of Tommy. But put her among the kind of people he's used to and see how she'll bear that comparison! When he sees her trying to eat oysters with a spoon, for instance, and mistaking father's butler for the President of the United States—if I'd only taken her in for a few days and asked people to meet her!—— I wonder if it's too late now?"

The more she thought along these lines the less she thought that it was too late to do anything. Celestia's address, owing to the notoriety of the Octagon fire, was now common knowledge, and without any exact plan Mary determined to visit her—as a preliminary to disillusioning Tommy.

She confided this idea to no one.

Six months of persistent love-making could not have advanced Tommy's cause as far as had one lighted cigarette butt thrown into a pile of greasy rags.

She, the messenger from heaven, had been saved from a hideous death, not by any direct intervention of heaven, but by the ready will and strong hands of a young man who did not believe in her, or her cause, but merely loved her.

During those moments when it had seemed as if death could not be put off, Celestia had thought very little about saving the world and making it happier.

Like any other young girl in the same situation, she had thought principally of saving her own skin. And remembering that this had been so she could not but be a little shaken as to her own powers and worthiness.

She believed herself a human being for the time she should remain on earth! But not a human being born of human parents.

In heaven she had been all celestial, and would be celestial once more when she returned to heaven. She had merely been changed temporarily into a human being by the Divine Will for Divine purposes. That was what she believed, with the complete faith of a little child.

The Octagon fire did not really shake Celestia's faith in herself, her origin or her destiny, but it set her to asking questions. What line must she draw between herself as a human being and herself as a celestial?

Already certain pains of this earth and certain pleasures had been thrust upon her. She had not been able to prevent the fire or to escape its terrors.

No more could she keep her heart from beating a little quicker whenever she thought of Tommy. How long was she to be a human being? Until her work was done—a few years at best. She would have to eat, and to drink and to sleep. What other indulgences could she grant herself? Only such as would not interfere with her work. Is the best work done on a minimum of pain or pleasure or a maximum?

If she had to love all men, was there one whom she must not love more than all the others put together? Had Douglass, before he broke his arm, worked better or worse because he had a loving and faithful wife? Why, far better, of course! He had indeed at one time been in the drinking way, but a pair of eyes, you wouldn't have thought them especially bright or blue, but he did—had saved him.

A pleasing photograph of the beautiful Anita Stewart

Already Tommy had helped her with her work. If only by the fact of saving her life so that she could work. If he could be always near her, wouldn't he be always helping? And she couldn't answer any of these questions satisfactorily.

There were two voices in her mind. One kept saying, "Let yourself go—love him—it's all right," while the other kept saying, "Of course you are human for the moment, but you have no right to be as the human are. You mustn't let one man displace from your heart that love of the whole world which it contains."

Of one thing only she was sure—that she would decide nothing until she was sure that her decision was right. But this begging of the question for the time being did not seem to have a silencing effect upon Tommy himself.

A man, erroneously, assumes certain rights or claims upon a certain woman. If she won't be this, at least she ought to be, because he saw her first, or he was first to love her, or he intervened in her behalf and saved her from something or other—in the case of Celestia, Tommy had saved her from death. Also he had been the first to see her, and the first to love her.

"Celestia," he said to her one day his hands still in bandages from superficial burns, "if only to be logical and consistent, you ought to marry me. I know that you are absolutely sincere in the belief that you are going to make the whole world happy. I'm a small part of the world. Unless you make me happy—and you don't show any symptoms of doing that—you can't possibly succeed, can you?"

Celestia considered, half smiling. Then she said, wholly smiling:

"What did you mean the other day when you said merely to look at me, merely to breathe the same air I breathed, merely to hear the sound of my voice, was happiness for you?"

"Oh, Celestia," he said, hopelessly, "there's no answer to questions like that. Those are the things that a man just has to say to the girl he loves. I don't know why he has to say 'em, but he does. They are the truth and not the truth. It's heaven just to look at you. Yes, it is. And in the moment of looking it's hell to think that maybe you are never going to love me and belong to me."

"But marriage," she said more gravely, "is a whole life's work in itself. And already I've a whole life's work cut out for me."

"Celestia," said Tommy, "you are so wonderful I believe you could do two whole life's works at once. I do. And I—well, maybe I could manage one on my own account; but it wouldn't be work. It would be doing things I just couldn't help doing—loving you and trying to make you happy."

"Tommy," said Celestia, "if now, when we are not even engaged"——

"I am."

—"not even engaged to be married, you exert yourself in every way to keep me from going about among the people and telling them how the world may be made a better state, try, in fact, to keep me all to yourself, how would it be if we were married? I've got to go the way I have been sent to go, and you, with the law on your side, and all the traditions of a man's rights in marriage, would try to prevent me"——

"What if I promised not to?"

"You'd have to promise that."

Do You Know That—

The Turk's equivalent of our handshake greeting is to cross his hands on his breast and make an obeisance.

Garlic, salt, bread and steak are put into the cradle of a new-born child in Holland.

Ruskin said that in all the works of Shakespeare he had no heroes, but only heroines.

A favorite motto for old-time posy rings was: "My heart is thine, true love of mine."

In Scotland it is said that to rock an empty cradle will insure another occupant.

In illness two pillows are much better on a bed than a bolster and a pillow.

An infant does not hear until the third or fourth day after birth.

A Shame

"I hit upon a neat way of keeping my wife from saying 'I told you so.'"

"What is it?"

"Before we were married I told her she would often say, 'I told you so' to me, and to spite me she has never said it once."

INDOOR LIFE MAKES FAT

TAKE OIL OF KOREIN TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN, OR TO REDUCE SUPERFLUOUS FAT.

People who are confined within doors and who are deprived of fresh, invigorating air and exercise must take precaution to guard against over-stoutness, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body. Lack of exercise in the fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, so that it is unable to produce strong muscles and vitality and the formation of unsightly and unhealthy fat is the result.

If you are 15 or 20 pounds above normal weight you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. Any person who is satisfied in their own mind that they are too stout should go to a good druggist and get a box of oil of korein capsules, and take one just before retiring at night.

Even a few days' treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight, digestion should improve, energy return, footsteps become lighter and the skin less flabby in appearance.

Oil of korein is inexpensive, cannot injure, helps the digestion and is designed to increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. Any person who wants to reduce their weight 15 or 20 pounds should give this treatment a trial. There is nothing better.

Their Married Life

Helen Plays the Part of Comforter with a Happy Feeling of Usefulness

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

HELEN, in spite of herself, heaved a sigh of relief as she looked around the apartment and realized that her mother had gone. She was conscience-stricken the next minute, and scolded herself furiously for allowing such a thought to enter her mind, but the thought was there just the same.

There was a new excitement in the thought that she would be alone when Warren came home from business that evening, that anything she might say would not have to be said before a third party, that even if Warren came home out of temper and scolded, she would not have the added humiliation of having her mother overhear it all.

She had just seen her mother off on the train. The station had been close and crowded. Helen had no desire to travel, and the thought of the hot weather coming made her cross. She had answered her mother absentmindedly when she had said that they would expect Helen to come out soon for a visit. Helen loved her old home in the little village, but the idea of sleepers and hot trains was not appealing.

She had thought she would walk to the subway station, but she hadn't gone far when a shoe began to hurt, and she decided to take a taxi. It couldn't be more than seventy cents and it was worth it. Helen sank into the back seat and sighed.

On second thought she winced at the extravagance of a taxi, and resolved to make up for it by suggesting that Warren take a few dollars off her monthly allowance. As it was she just managed to scrape through nicely, with once in a while a little over to put in the bank. Once she had saved up and had bought a French clock she had wanted for ages.

Warren had commended her when she told him it had been bought out of the money he had given her. She hated to do with any less, but perhaps, she thought to herself, Warren would refuse to accept such a piece of self-sacrifice, she hoped so.

Helen stretched out on the bed in her room and closed her eyes drowsily. Then the bell rang.

"Didn't you know I was lying down, Nora? Why didn't you tell whoever it was that I was out?"

"I was going to, Mrs. Curtis," said Nora, "but she said it was very important, and so I thought I'd better come and wake you up."

"Well, who is it?"

"Mrs. Bob Curtis, ma'am."

Helen sat up immediately. "Well, why didn't you say so before? Of course I want to see her. Where is she?"

"In the living room, ma'am."

"Louise, Louise," called Helen, hurrying to the door. "Why didn't you come right in? Goodness, child, you're not company. I was lying down—lazy, that's all, and the heat."

Louise came to the door of the living room and smiled at Helen a piteous little smile, Helen thought, and she went forward impulsively, and put her arms around the taller woman.

Louise suddenly began to cry, and Helen, genuinely alarmed, soothed her gently and led the way into the living room.

"Oh, Helen, it's Bob," said Louise, finally. "You know there isn't another thing in the world that would make me unhappy."

"Of course not, but what is it?"

"Bob and I quarreled." The words came haltingly. "We were so foolish, too, but he phoned to-day and I thought it was all over, but he said he wasn't coming home to dinner."

"What was it all about?"

"The most trivial thing in the world, Helen, and Bob was so hard and relentless as he was before we were married; only I wouldn't believe he could treat me the way he did."

"But what was it about, dear?"

"Mrs. Everly called, and Bob can't bear her. She stayed later than I had supposed, and Bob said afterward that he thought I had better sense. I said he had no right to speak that way, and one thing led to another. I was so ashamed, Helen! We haven't quarreled like this once before, and I can't understand Bob's attitude."

Helen soothed her as well as she could and had Nora bring in tea. She convinced Louise that it was foolish to be so sensitive. Of course, a first quarrel was hard to bear, but everything would come out all right. Perhaps they had both been out of sorts, and no doubt Bob was as sorry as she was. As Helen went into her room to get dressed she had a warm little feeling around her heart. She was even happier than she would have been if she had lounged in her room till dinner. How splendid it was to be able to help anyone who was in trouble! There was nothing like it in the world.

Zoe—The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

"THAT would mean certain inquiry, and consequent danger; but both the other plans are safe. The choice lies between a burial in the lake at the back of my place—you know? It's very deep, and it could be managed easily. Besides, it is a good burial. A few pounds' weight would ensure"——

"No, no!" gasped Crawley. "It's too awful!"

"Of course, there is danger there, too," said Brooke, with grim reserve. "One can never be certain when the police start. Now, my third plan, I think, is the best and easiest."

"And what is that?"

"Cremation," said Brooke.

"Cremation!"

Crawley started. After the first thrill of horrified surprise he realized that this was, at least, a course, if it could be carried out, which would ensure the greatest safety. It would entirely dispose of the body.

"That old barn—there's a good deal of it left and a heap of straw inside," said Brooke. "A case of accident—a tramp's match, or even a case of deliberate arson. It doesn't matter. All I know is this: if once a fire got hold of that barn nothing would save it. And then—well—there you are." He shrugged his broad shoulders. "Now, let's have done with talking and get to work. I'll have a casual look around and see if the coast is clear. I'll send your hall porter with a message and get him out of the way. I'll wire Norris at the Laurels and prepare him; I'll also get the car ready. I must alter the number, I think. I'll drive. You'd better sit behind—you understand? I'll take you down to Hatchington under an hour and a half, with luck. By the way, I mustn't forget to send a wire to Di. Ah, Crawley, you'll swear to me she shall never know anything of this horrible business?"

Crawley staggered forward. A sudden faintness was overpowering him.

"She shall never know," he murmured faintly; "never!"

Then he sank forward into a huddled heap in the armchair and covered his white face with his hands.

"The coast is clear," whispered Brooke. "Are you ready?"

It was but a quarter of an hour later.

"Yes," answered Crawley faintly.

"Can you manage alone?"

"Yes. You go down to the car."

"No, I had better stay here, in case it is too heavy. I've sent my telegrams. Everything is in order. You'd better leave a message for Hutton. You won't be back tonight. See also that—that there is nothing incriminating left behind. You understand?"

"I have done so," answered the artist, who had donned a thick ulster and tweed cap.

Brooke was smoking.

There was nothing in the appearance of the two men to suggest anything out of the ordinary, unless, perhaps, it was their exceeding pallor.

"Come on, then. If the worst comes to the worse and we meet any one, you can only be carrying a friend—my wife, if you like, to disarm suspicion—who has come over a little faint. Keep your head whatever you do. I wish you'd let me carry it down."

"But I won't," answered Crawley sharply. "You shall not touch her. You understand. We have agreed on that."

Brooke started and looked sharply at the younger man. It had only just occurred to him that perhaps Crawley had been fond of Zoe, and that her death meant much to him. In consequence he felt somewhat embarrassed, and bowed his head.

"I am sorry, sonny," he said. "I—I didn't understand."

"And you shall never see her face?"

"No, I promise. I think I understand how you feel. But come along; we are wasting time."

Crawley stood irresolute for a moment; then, clenching his teeth and squaring his shoulders, he left Brooke in the hall and strode into the studio. A moment later he returned, bearng a sad burden. Around her he had wrapped some dark red fabric which covered her completely. Brooke raised his hat before he remembered the part he must play.

"Switch off the light," panted Crawley, "and shut the door!"

A minute afterward he had placed the body of Zoe in the huge body of the car and covered it reverently with a rug.

He had met no one on the stairs. The hall porter had not yet returned from the message which Brooke had bribed him to take. The street was almost deserted.

Brooke started the engine and then settled himself in the bucket seat in front with the steering wheel. He exhibited no hurry. To Crawley he seemed unnecessarily deliberate.

IT FIXED UP SON IN GRAND SHAPE

Popular Boston Lady, Who Resides at 1413 Washington Street, Had Suffered.

That the stomach is responsible for 90 per cent. of all the diseases to which the human system is heir, is generally conceded by the medicinal profession. When we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of liver, kidney and bladder disorders, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will correct its harmful influence. Plant Juice is proving that it is truly a specific for all cases of stomach trouble. It exercises the greatest restorative effect in the stomach, yet it is effective in the liver, kidneys and with rheumatism, indigestion, constipation and their attending evils disappear before its powerful regulating influences; it gives one a good appetite, sound digestion and brings back the flush of health to pale cheeks. When nature calls for assistance it is needed quickly, but it must be a remedy that leaves no bad after effects, that builds up, not tears down.

That this is the logical effect of Plant Juice is attested by testimonials of well-known Boston people who have regained their health by the use of this preparation. For instance, Mrs. B. F. Andrew, who resides at No. 1413 Washington Street, and who has lived in Boston for 23 years, and is a well-known lady here, in a recent signed testimonial stated:

"I had suffered from stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and nervous troubles for 20 years. I had headaches and dizzy spells. After I would eat a little food it would ferment, causing bloating and gas belching. I could not eat any vegetables, for if I did I suffered great distress afterwards, so I had to be very careful about my diet. When I arose in the morning I had that tired out feeling. I have only taken one bottle of Plant Juice, and I can say it is a wonderful medicine. I can now eat any kind of food and enjoy my meals, and have no more aches or pains. I am feeling fine. I have also given Plant Juice to my son, as he had suffered from stomach trouble, and it is fixing him up in grand shape."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett's drug store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Advertisement.

ELAINE'S ARCH FOE IS SLAIN AFTER A DESPERATE STRUGGLE

WU FANG, he of the baleful Serpent Sign, was called out of town by a note from a group of powerful foreign agents known as the Intelligence Office.

"Information has come to us that Craig Kennedy invented a new wireless automatic torpedo. Already a letter is on its way informing him that it has been accepted by the Navy. We must get both of those models, the one he has and the one the government has."

"I can get them," answered the Chinaman.

In his attempts to secure them Wu came face to face at the water's edge with his arch enemy. In a struggle for the possession of the torpedo both plunged into the water. Even there, relentlessly, the combat continued till Craig Kennedy killed the Oriental with his own dagger.

WALSH'S CHINESE STARTLES LENOX

For just about twelve minutes this morning His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts had everybody at the Hotel Lenox, from Manager [illegible] Price up to old Hughey McGovern, the head boss of the [illegible], worried within an inch of his [illegible]. His Excellency was talking Chinese.

Governor Walsh, an early riser even when he has been a late stayer, strolled into the Lenox grill at 7 by the clock. He was pleasantly greeted by "Highball John" Kelliher, the [illegible] and the youngest-regular waiter in the business.

"Good morning, John," said Governor Walsh. "Hime chungor-go, chougo wadgya."

"Highball" wasn't sure, but he [illegible] to take a chance. "It may be," says John to himself—says he—"that the Governor is trying Gaelic on me."

"[illegible]," says Highball. [illegible]

BAD GUESSING.

But no, that wasn't it at all, for the Governor repeated:

"Hime chungor-go, chougo wadgya."

"I don't think we've got a bit of it in the house, Governor," says John, "but I'll ask Hughey."

Mr. McGovern had the bell boys rouse Manager Price out of bed. Mr. Price called upon Private Secretary Connolly, who was clipping the morning newspapers for his boss, and Mr. Connolly explained everything.

"Tell Highball," Secretary Connolly said, "that the Governor went yesterday to the complimentary banquet to the Commercial Commission of the Republic of China given at the [illegible] restaurant in Essex street by the United Chinese Association of Boston. 'Hime chungor-go' as Kelliher ought to know, is Chinese for orange juice. 'Chougo wadgya' is chicken, in some style or other."

TIME OF HIS LIFE.

Governor Walsh declared today that he has seldom enjoyed himself so much, or been so entertained and instructed as he was at the Sunday dinner given to the Chinese Commissioners by the merchants of Boston's Chinatown.

Lee Sun Lung, proprietor of [illegible] newspapers in Canton, [illegible] and Shanghai, went with the Governor from the banquet to a mass meeting of 300 Chinese men, women and children in a hall at the corner of Washington and Kneeland streets. Editor Lee made a speech in which he complimented the Chinese of Boston on the standing they have acquired in New England through their respect for law and order. Mr. Lee introduced Governor Walsh, for whom the editor acted as interpreter.

"I am glad to appear before the Chinese of Boston," Governor Walsh said, "and I take this occasion to say that the people of Massachusetts have come to know them and to have a high regard for their habits of industry and thrift. Now that China has come to be a republic modelled after the United States, it is likely that we shall come to have a better understanding than ever.

"The early Chinese who came among us labored under a great handicap, for they were unfamiliar not only with our laws and our customs, but with our language. Nowadays, there are Chinese in Boston who speak perfect English. I am told that in the schools your little folks do remarkably well.

Indian Dances Much Like Present Day "Rag"—All Wore Sleigh Bells, so Noise Drowned Out the Music of the Drums—Story of Old 'Tippecanoe' Harrison Woven into Legend.

(Copyright, 1915, by A. Merritt. All rights Reserved.)

I NEVER want to have a better time than when I lived among the Indians. I worked hard, but it was all out in the open and I had plenty of time for skylarking around.

I used to like to go to the Indian dances, and because I always took some trinkets along I was a mighty popular fellow.

Funny, but the dancing we did was a lot like the present day "rag," although we didn't put our arm around the girl's waist. The drums pounded out the time, and we all wore sleigh bells, so that when things warmed up there was a good deal of noise.

On Winter nights I would sit around a roaring fire with the old men, and they would fill me to the brim with stories about how brave and warlike the Pottowattomies used to be.

Their one great fight against the whites was way back in 1811, when they joined forces with the Shawnees, Wyandottes, Kickapoos, Ottawas and Chippewas. Old "Tippecanoe" Harrison whipped them to a standstill in a single battle.

The Pottowattomies handed the story down from father to son, and, just like prize-fighters, they had a good alibi. It seems that the Prophet, who was making medicine on a hill, turned his back for a minute, and his wife touched the pots. That broke the charm that was to give them victory over the palefaces.

That was about all the fighting the Pottowattomies did, and I figure that the greatness of their chiefs lay in keeping out of trouble. I found them a kindly, well behaved lot of people, with the makings of good farmers if it hadn't been for whiskey.

Even if my experience with the drunken tramp had not given me a horror of drinking, seeing what whiskey did to the Indians would have made me a sober man.

With my own eyes I saw "fire water" turn many a big, fine man into a crawling beast, robbing them of their strength and cutting their lives right in half.

You can talk about civilization all you want to, but a civilization that walks hand in hand with whiskey is a devilish thing, and the world would be better off without it.

I have seen Indians drink Jamaica ginger, which is 95 per cent alcohol. I have seen them swill down lemon and vanilla extracts, and there are cases where the unfortunate wretches have even taken shellac varnish and floated the alcohol in it.

The Government did its best to protect the Indian from whiskey, but in those days there were still a good many "boot leggers." These fellows would sneak through the country with whiskey in a wagon, in their saddle bags or in their pockets, and drive hard bargains with the Indians, who would give anything they had for "fire water."

The best thing that ever happened to Kansas was when it went "dry." Each year has put more drug stores out of business, and to-day the boys of Kansas are growing up without ever knowing the inside of a saloon or being bothered with temptations at a time when they haven't got sense enough to resist.

After I left Woodchuck and went into business for myself, my next big move was a journey to Wyoming. The ponies I was getting in Kansas weren't very big or strong and could hardly do the heavy field work that was wanted of them. So I made up my mind to visit the Wyoming ranges and see if I couldn't pick up a better lot.

I hit Cheyenne first, and worked out from there. The Wyoming ponies looked mighty good to me, and I bought quite a number, sending them back to my place in Kansas to be broken when I went back. I had a fine time in Wyoming, although I didn't find the "bad man" that I had hoped to see.

All through my boyhood I had heard stories of men with notches on their guns—fellows who could shoot from the hip and hit the heart every time. I reckon the breed must have died out, for I never met a single one.

The only fight I saw was between a drunken man and a town marshal. At first I thought that the cowpuncher was a bad man, and he thought so himself. It didn't take the marshal long to prove that it was just a case of bad whiskey.

Mack and the big cinnamon were mixed up entirely too close for us to shoot.

It was in a saloon, and the fellow had a gun out and was waving it around with a lot of wild talk. He told everybody that he was a rattlesnake whose bite was sudden death, and then he changed his mind, and decided that he was a timber wolf, and that when he howled the whole population had better take to the cyclone cellar. The marshal heard the noise and came in the saloon and told the cowpuncher to drop his gun and come along to jail.

"Me go to jail?" He couldn't believe his ears. "Why, there ain't a pen in the world that can hold me. I bite my way through steel. I'm a grizzly bear and I'm looking for meat."

I thought sure I was going to see a killing, but the marshal didn't even draw a gun. He just looked the cowpuncher square in the face for a minute or so, and then he walked up to him slow and gave him an awful slap in the face.

"You ain't no grizzly bear," he said. "You're just a plain [illegible] with a bad case of mange."

The best sport I had in Wyoming was a bear hunt in the Medicine Bow range country. I went with two friends who were said to be great hunters, and I reckon they were. Anyway, we got a bear.

For two weeks we tramped the mountain sides, crawling up and down canyons and digging our way through pinon patches and scrub oak without ever catching sight of anything bigger than rabbit and grouse. The last few days I got to believing that there wasn't any such things as bears and took up trout fishing as a steady sport.

I had always been used to still water fishing, and whipping a mountain stream was a new experience to me. Every morning I would get up and spend the day sliding down the mountain side on my hip pockets. If ever I have a fight anywhere near the mountains I am going to take up trout fishing as a way of getting in shape.

Like almost everything in a fellow's life, the bear happened when I wasn't watching for him. We were moving camp, and I had my fishing rod in my hand, watching out for likely pools. My gun was piled in with the pack on the burro.

Mack, one of the hunters, had been hitting up his bottle the night before, and was feeling mighty sick and sullen. Whenever he had anything to say it was some mean remark to Bill, a nice, quiet, sober little fellow, who was always busy minding his own business.

Mack was a strapping fellow, standing over six feet, and weighing close to two hundred and eighty. He was mighty proud of his strength, and always boasting that he could kill a bear with his hands.

Well, he was given his chance. We struck a big cinnamon right in the middle of a [illegible] path. He didn't have any chance to [illegible], and neither did we. Bill had dropped [illegible] behind the burro before he saw the bear, and there was only Mack to do business with the big brown [illegible].

[illegible] a cinnamon always [illegible]. This one [illegible] forward, and as he rose to his hind feet I yelled to Mack to shoot. Lord, he wasn't ten feet away, and he looked as big as the side of a house.

It wasn't fear that made Mack's hands tremble. It was his jag of the night before. When he raised his gun it wabbled like a bean pole in a [illegible] wind. His nerves were on edge and that smashed his "nerve." He [illegible] I knew that he would miss!

The bear had him before his finger left the trigger. As he fell, [illegible] a knife. What with the bear's growling and me and Mack yelling, there was noise enough to bring Bill on the run.

He didn't dare try for a shot, for Mack and the cinnamon were mixed up entirely too close, so he dropped the gun and drew the big dirk that was at his belt.

He didn't waste any time, Bill didn't. He jumped into the middle of the mess, and in a minute his knife hand was going up and down like a pump handle. I'm not saying that he could have done it if the bear hadn't been busy with Mack, but just the same he killed that cinnamon with that knife. The last smash he put in sent the dirk right up to the hilt in the bear's heart.

Mack was pretty badly clawed, but at that he was more scared than hurt. When we made camp that evening Bill opened up the pack and took out the whiskey bottles and smashed them on a rock. He didn't say anything, neither did Mack.

I left for home soon after that, broke my ponies, and sold them for better prices than I had ever gotten before.

BOSTON POLICE SEEKING THAYER

Postoffice inspectors of this district to-day began an investigation of the report that Postmaster Otis C. Thayer of Lancaster is missing.

Thayer has not been seen in Lancaster since his arrest in Boston a week ago, charged with operating an auto while under the influence of liquor. The Boston police hold a default warrant for Thayer, following his failure to appear for a continued hearing after his release on bail, and the police are trying to nd himfi.

Mrs. Thayer today admitted the postmaster had not been in Lancaster for several days. She refused to say whether she knew where Mr. Thayer was, or when he expected him to return.

The postoffice business at Lancaster is being conducted by Mr. Thayer's daughter, Agnes. The The Penacock Garage, of which Postmaster Thayer is proprietor, has been in charge of Mrs. Thayer for some time. Thayer, who is 52, has another daughter, Gladys.

Radcliffe Girl Answers Exams in Blank Verse

Doris F. Halman of Brookline, in writing entirely in blank verse the answers to a three-hour examination in the history of education, has accomplished a feat without precedent at Radcliffe College.

She not only answered correctly every question on the paper, but put the answers into perfect verse within the time alloted for the test. Miss Halman wrote more than 300 lines of perfect verse without an error and her feat is considered by the faculty nothing short of phenomenal.

The first two or three replies came hard, but after she had swung into the metre of the verse which she employed, the rest was comparatively easy. Professor Moore pronounced every answer correct, giving the Brookline girl the highest grade possible for her remarkable work.

'KIDDIES' TRIP TO BEACH JUNE 23

One week from next Wednesday, June 23, will be "the day of days" for the tired mothers and children of Greater Boston. Each year, after the schools have closed, the Boston AMERICAN charters the entire fleet of luxurious steamboats of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company and turns them over to the mothers and children of Greater Boston for one day for their exclusive use.

The AMERICAN'S third annual "Mother's and Children's Day" will be greater this year than ever before because new guests are added to the party every year and those who have taken the trip in previous years are always on deck when the whistle blows.

It is a sight to stir the enthusiasm of young and old alike to see that immense party of happy children off with their mothers for a glorious day at the seashore, and the special arrangements which the AMERICAN has made insure a delightful day's recreation, entertainment and pleasure at Paragon Park, which has been donated for their use by Manager George E. Dodge.

There will be a special and almost continuous performance in Paragon Park. The troupe of trained polar bears will perform their amusing antics for the delight of the youngsters. When the polar bears chute the chutes into a lagoon it is a sight which even the grown-ups seem to find as interesting as the children do.

The familiar Moxie wagons will be on hand this year, as they were last, to appease the thirsty with that delightful and refreshing beverage and to do it free of all charge, through the courtesy of Mr. F. M. Archer of the Moxie Company.

General Manager Fred Line of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company has his boat schedule all prepared and it will be announced within a day or two.

The principal thing for everyone to bear in mind is to get next Sunday's AMERICAN and clip the Nantasket Beach coupon and present it as directed next Sunday. It will be well for those desiring to enjoy this third annual outing to act promptly next Sunday, because the demand for these tickets is certain to exceed the supply.

MORRISON HELD IN JITNEY KILLING

PAWTUCKET, R. I., June 14.—Charged with the murder of Leslie P. Hopkins of Providence, driver of a jitney bus, as he drove his car in this city, Herbert J. Morrison, alias Herbert J. Cook, was today held without bail for a further hearing on June 28.

Morrison, who was arraigned before Judge Tuck in the Tenth District Court, pleaded not guilty.

The police are still unable to ascribe a motive for the shooting. Morrison was captured by Emil J. [illegible] of No. 92 Appleton street, who, with his wife, was aroused by the report of a shot. They rushed around the corner into Broadway to see a man with a smoking revolver fire a shot point blank at Hopkins who was huddled up on the footboard of the jitney.

The man with the revolver broke away from [illegible], who is a special constable. Later a man arrested for drunkenness was identified by [illegible] as the one who escaped from him.

This man, at first held on suspicion, was finally formally charged with the murder. He at first said he came from Boston, but later gave the name of Morrison and declared he lived in Lonsdale, R. I.

WOOD MAY FACE INDIANS TODAY

Lee Fohl and his band of Cleveland Indians will resume hostilities with the Red Sox at Fenway Park this afternoon.

Joe Wood will probably face the visitors this afternoon. The smoke ball pitcher is traveling at a merry clip just now and believes that he would be able to dispose of the Cleveland combination. If Wood performs on the mound for the clan of Carrigan, Fohl's men will have to play at top speed all of the time if they are to finish in front.

Just now the Red Sox are playing hard [illegible] baseball. They are out to win the American League pennant and would like to make a clean sweep in their series with the Indians. The Red Sox figure that the White Sox and Tigers are the only clubs which it has to beat out in order to grab off the bunting, and it is desirous of increasing its number of wins at the expense of the visitors.

Manager Fohl of Cleveland will try and upset Carrigan's plans. He will probably send Willie Mitchell after today's game. If Mitchell does not warm up right, Hagerman will probably be named to do mound duty.

Southworth made a big hit by his swell playing in Saturday's game. This youngster made two hits and fielded his position in brilliant style. He looks like a fixture in the outfield for the Indians if he can continue to play at his present clip.

Rath Goes to Toronto.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 14.—Manager Shay of the Kansas City American Association baseball club sold Morris Rath, third baseman, to the Toronto club of the International League, according to a message from Columbus, Ohio, where the local team is playing. Joe Leonard, an infielder with Columbus, has been purchased to play Rath's position.

TURVILLE TO RIDE BIG PACED RACE

"Pinkie" Turville, Revere's own bike favorite, will make his first local appearance in a professional contest at the Revere cycle track next Thursday night, when he meets George Wiley, Clarence Carman and Victor Linart in a one-hour motor-paced race.

Turville has just graduated from the amateur ranks but has made a sensational start in the professional world. Worth Mitten, Norman Hansen and Tony Colombatto, champion of Italy, being numbered among his first victims on his entry into the motor-paced game.

Turville is one of the most sensational youngsters that has yet broken into pace following. His father is one of the pacemakers at the beach and it was from dad that the younger Turville learned the fine points of the game. He wisely started his professional career away from home and now, with a string of victories trailing in his path, he expects to enter his own stamping ground in a burst of glory. Turville is not one of those youngsters who gets the idea into his head that he is going to sweep everything before him right off the reel. He knows that the men he is to be pitted against Thursday night are riders who have had years of experience.

He is confident, however, that he will be able to make a good showing. And any man who can number Mitten among his victims is bound to do well. Everybody at Revere knows Mitten and what he is capable of doing. So Turville's record speaks for itself.

With Wiley, Linart and Carman travelling as they are the race is sure to be a thriller. Linart has yet to lose a race this year, while Wiley is riding as he never did before. This was shown Saturday night when the little New Yorker lowered the colors of Leon Didier and Georges Sérès.

BRAVES AND CUBS IN HOT SERIES

CHICAGO, June 14.—Undaunted by their defeat in their first clash with the leading Cubs, the champion Braves are supremely confident that they will annex the second game today.

"Lefty" Tyler or Tom Hughes will go after this afternoon's setto, while Cheney will probably be named to do the twirling for Chicago.

The remaining games here are likely to be full of pepper, as neither team showed much friendly feeling in the opener.

The Cubs got back on a par with the Phillies by thumping the Boston Braves 6 to 4, in a freakish game yesterday. The world's champs celebrated their 1915 debut here by hammering Big Jim Vaughn off the hill in the first round, during which they sent a quartet of tallies over.

The West Siders, nothing daunted, came right back in their portion of the inning and battered Dick Rudolph hard enough to knot the count.

Miracle Man Stallings didn't think the attack would last and didn't remove Richard until a couple of rounds later, and in this time Chicago counted twice again. Bresnahan, however, lost no time in supplanting Hippo with Jim Lavender, who easily shut out the Champs in the concluding eight periods. After the Cubs had cinched the fray Rudolph was removed in favor of old Otto Hess.

The game was marked with frequent scraps between the Bostonians and Umpire Quigley, who had to order all the Braves subs to the showers before he could regain his equanimity.

Another feature was some inside stuff perpetrated by Stallings, who tried to put something over on Bresnahan by naming Ragan and Bill James as outfielders as the game began.

Signs with Detroit.

ITHACA, June 14.—Stephen J. Regan, crack pitcher on the Cornell baseball team for two years, has signed a contract to play with the Detroit American League team and will report to Manager Jennings on July 4.

GALLANT AND WOLGAST CLASH IN ATLAS A. A. GO TOMORROW

By JACK CONWAY.

LIGHTWEIGHT boxers will occupy the centre of the pugilistic stage this week. Three important tussles are scheduled to be decided between 133-135-pound glove men and some rugged battles are expected.

Gilbert Gallant, Chelsea's hard hitting lightweight, and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion of the world, will clash in one of the chief bouts of the week at the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night. The men are scheduled to perform over the twelve-round distance and they should furnish plenty of action.

Charley White, Chicago's sensational lightweight entry, will also get a little exercise in the ring this week. He is booked to meet "Young" Brown in a ten-round encounter in New York tomorrow night. Brown has exchanged blows with such men as Jack Britton and Willie Beecher and is expected to force White to show at his best. Brown made a trip to Thornton, R. I., last week and knocked out "Young" Dyson of Providence in eleven sessions.

Another big lightweight whirl will be held in Gotham Friday evening when Leach Cross and Johnny Dundee meet in a ten-round skirmish. Cross and Dundee are old rivals and should furnish a hot battle.

Cross and Dundee both showed at the Atlas Club last year. The "fans" in these parts would like to see the winner of the New York engagement signed to battle Charley White at the Arena.

THE bout between Wolgast and Gallant will probably furnish more fast fighting than either of the other contests. Ad and Gallant are both aggressive fighters and consequently there should be but few idle moments at the Atlas Club tomorrow night.

Boxing lovers usually prefer to see two typical fighters in action. Clever glove men are admired, but it is fighters of the Wolgast and Gallant type who pack the "fans" into a boxing club. This is one of the principal reasons why Charley White is such a big attraction. He is a natural fighter and does not rely upon clever footwork and skill to win his battles.

It would not be a surprise to the writer if Gallant entered the ring a favorite over Wolgast. Many close followers of the glove game believe that "Gill's" wonderful strength and ability to land a hard punch will enable him to outlast Wolgast.

WOLGAST is the fourth member of the greatest quartet of lightweights in the country to come here within a year. Freddy Welsh was first, Charlie White followed him, then came Willie Ritchie and now Wolgast is in our midst.

Three of them have been title holders. Welsh, Ritchie and Wolgast have worn the lightweight crown and each fought many interesting battles. White has fought each member of the trio, but the bouts have been over the short route. White declares that Wolgast is the most obstinate of the bunch. They met in Milwaukee in 1913, White having the best of the going.

IT took Wolgast forty rounds to win the title from Battling Nelson. The fight is said to have been one of the greatest in the history of the ring, and Nelson was on the verge of sinking to the mat when the late Eddie Smith of Oakland led him to his corner in a Point Richmond ring a defeated man.

Wolgast surrendered his title to Willie Ritchie, who in turn relinquished it to Freddie Welsh. Wolgast claimed that he was deprived of it unjustly when Referee Jim Griffin disqualified him, and Ritchie set up a similar claim when Welsh was awarded a verdict in London.

The Cadillac "Wildcat," as Wolgast is sometimes called, has not gone back, according to the New York experts. He is fighting as good as he ever did, and in a return battle with Ritchie at Milwaukee he asserted his superiority in ten rounds.

DAVE POWERS, Malden's husky welterweight, will meet George Alger of Cambridge in the semi-final match of eight rounds. Fred Nolan says that Powers is in fine condition and confident of winning. There will also be two six-round bouts. Howard McRae will clash with "Young" Stone, while "Young" Clancy will battle "Young" Brusso.

Wilding's Brother Will Perpetuate Name in Tennis

It is not likely that the name of Wilding, made famous in the annals of international lawn tennis by Anthony F. Wilding, will disappear from the lists of future Davis cup matches.

There is a younger brother who is rapidly rounding into the fullness of racquet skill, and who is confidently expected to fill the gap in the Australasian ranks left vacant by the untimely death of the well beloved Tony Wilding.

The Hon. F. M. B. Fisher of Wellington, N. Z., who is a member of the Australian parliament, has attended most of the cup matches on local courts. He is a friend of Frederick B. Alexander, one of the first American Davis Cup players to visit Australia. When not umpiring matches Fisher tells of thrilling episodes in the matches which Tony Wilding fought.

Hannes Kolehmainen Beaten in Long Run

Hannes Kolehmainen, the world's foremost amateur distance runner, failed to overcome the generous handicaps allotted his rivals in the three-mile feature at Celtic Park, and finished in fifth position.

The hitherto invincible Finn, the only scratch man in the race, ran gamely all the way, but could not catch up with Frank Masterson of the New York A. C., who won the event and three others. Masterson started from the 200-yard mark and led Kolehmainen to the worsted by half a lap.

Pat Flynn, the veteran distancer of the Irish club, was second. He started from the 100-yard mark, as did Tom Barden, also of the Irish club, who finished third. Masterson's time was 14 minutes 36 3-5 seconds.

New York Giants May Secure Archer

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—It was reported here that the Giants may obtain the services of Jimmy Archer, the crack catcher of the Cubs, if a suitable price can be arranged for Squatting Jim. With Meyers out with a bad hand and McLean absolutely done, the Giants' catching is entirely up to two inexperienced youngsters, Smith and Wendell. It is said that Archer is not getting along very well with Roger Bresnahan and that the club has too much star catching material; that Archer was recently offered to the Reds. He has a high-salaried three-year contract, which the Cubs are trying to saddle on some other club.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the seventh of a series of articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

After you have slept well, the first thing you do when you get up is to have a good stretch. That is instinctive. During sleep, the circulation of the blood has slowed down, and has in some measure left the muscles, and collected in the interior of the body. The easiest way to get it back into the muscles is to stretch them, and instinct always takes the easiest way.

Instinctive stretching is exercise. But it is not scientific exercise. It is not thorough, and it is not systematic. It affects certain tracts of muscles, but not all. It does not affect all the muscles of the limbs and body symmetrically.

Your body is naturally symmetrical, exactly so externally, and more or less so inside. In all exercise, you must be careful to give one side of your body the same amount and kind of work as the other side. Men who do not exercise (and many who do) find one side—usually the right side—to be stronger than the left. For most of us are right-handed, and right-legged, too, though the latter is not so perceptible. The cause of this is referred to the brain, and need not now concern us. As we grow older, we grow more and more uneven. Place two mirrors so that one will reflect your image thrown upon the other; observe the latter, and you will see the unevenness.

Proper exercise will abate this unevenness, and you must aim at its correction in all your exercising. You can never reach the full possible measure of your strength, or of your health, so long as either side of you can do more than the other. Don't imagine this to be a slight matter; it is important; symmetry is not only beautiful but hygienic. If you begin with this idea of symmetry in your mind, you will find it much more easily realized than if you postpone attending to it till later. It is more difficult to correct a condition than to overcome a habit. Start right and you can go on right.

So the first thing when you get up in the morning, say to yourself that you will give every muscle of your body and limbs a sound stretching, both sides alike. But if one side be weaker than the other, give that side a little the more work.

A good resolution! But you will soon find that you don't know where all your muscles are, or, if you do, how to get at them in order to stretch them, or how to apply the fullest amount of force to the stretching. Well, do the best you can off-hand, and during the day, get a manual of anatomy and study the diagrams and descriptions. In the course of a week you will have begun to learn a number of useful facts. Go over yourself from top to toe, find out all the places, and how to get at them for exercise. Omit nothing, be patient and thorough. A little time spent on this study now will save you much hereafter.

When you have done the best you can for yourself on your own responsibility, you may get an exercise-book and substitute for any exercise you may have devised, any other, in the book, which promises to do the same work more effectively. By and by you will have a regular set of exercises mapped out; stick to that, and see where you will come out at the end of the first year.

Exercise naked when possible; outdoors when you have the chance, and when indoors, in front of a mirror and with open windows. Remember you are working to save your life, and to make it worth living, and be as conscientious and thorough about it as such an occasion demands.

Cobb and Daubert Lead Their League

Jake Daubert, captain of the Brooklyn Superbas and National League batting champion of 1913 and 1914, is again back on his old job. Last week Jake pushed Captain Fred Luderus of the Phillies from the top of the National League perch. Jake is hitting .374 against .365 for Pat Moran's first baseman. In the American League Ty Cobb continues to hang away well in front of the rest of the pack. Ty is sticking it out at a .410 clip and the hottest rival to Terrible Ty is his old shoeless rival, Joe Jackson. The Cleveland batter is hitting [illegible].

Ouimet in New York for National Open

YALE HARD HIT BY GRADUATION

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 11.—Of the Yale athletes who have won the university "Y" in the major sports of track, football, baseball and crew, [illegible] will return to Yale next year to compete in athletics. This number includes those who [illegible] will win their letters in the Yale-Harvard boat races June [illegible]. The rest of the letter men will be lost by graduation or because of ineligibility.

The crew and the track team are the hardest hit of the four major sports. Coach Guy Nickalls has just seven experienced varsity men around whom to form his squad. Two of these are substitutes this season, [illegible] however, than [illegible] lack of experience and ability. The men who will make up the nucleus for next year's squad are Seth Low, [illegible], A. M. Munson, M. M. Whittlesey, C. W. [illegible], H. R. [illegible] and Henry [illegible].

Coach Johnny Mack of the track team has just six "Y" men to work with next season. Wesley Oler, Jr., Johnny Overton, Treadway, Barker, Hampton and Johnstone are the ones who will return.

In baseball the loss of [illegible] will be the most serious to the team. Seven men who have won their letter thus far this season are expected back.

In football six men who won their letters last fall will return to play next September. They are Captain Wilson, Knowles, Gould, Von Holt, Legore and Waite.

Hauser Must Quit Cards in Order to Play in 1916

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—Arnold Hauser, who, during his [illegible] as shortstop for the Cardinals, was the greatest of the present day group, will be back in the major league in 1916.

This is the promise of Dr. William R. [illegible], who has been attending the [illegible] since January, 1914.

But Hauser will not wear a Cardinal uniform if Dr. [illegible] can prevent it. Dr. [illegible] will attempt to persuade Hauser to play elsewhere than in St. Louis. He agrees with the opinion of Dr. George William [illegible] that a change of scene is best for the famous shortstop.

Rowing Aids Penn Man's Crippled Leg

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 11.—Pennsylvania's No. 3 oar in the junior varsity, Frank [illegible], while handicapped for any other form of sport, has developed into a [illegible] oarsman. [illegible] when a child had [illegible] disease and as a result [illegible]. Coach Nickalls kept him on the squad and fixed a seat for him so that he could remain [illegible] and help keep the boat [illegible] without too much effort. With [illegible] the leg has strengthened and [illegible] lengthened [illegible]. Nickalls [illegible] the opinion that rowing is a cure for all ills.

HARVARD CREWS ENJOY DAY OFF

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, RED TOP, Ct., June 11.—The Harvard crews enjoyed complete rest Sunday when the entire camp went out for sails [illegible] Long Island Sound. The start was made early for both crews, [illegible] the float at [illegible], and did not return till after five, and reported the "best time yet."

The members of the varsity crew were entertained on board the steam yacht Viking, owned by George L. Baker, commodore of the New York Yacht Club, on a trip up Long Island Sound. The men enjoyed themselves, being allowed a dip in the briny, when off Shelter Island. The day was an ideal one and the trip was enjoyed by everyone, everything desired being on hand. The party returned to the quarters at five o'clock and it was felt that those participating in it were benefited to the extent desired. The members of the freshman crews could not be accommodated on board the Viking and they were taken on board Larz Anderson's houseboat, [illegible], where they were entertained royally and their destination [illegible] was Long Island Sound.

Captain [illegible] of the varsity crew, [illegible] a [illegible] place in the hearts of the oarsmen. The [illegible] at their disposal the launch John Harvard and they enjoyed a trip to Ocean Beach, where they spent the day.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

The Flag! Symbol of Our Eternal Rights

Let us, on this Flag Day, highly resolve that as citizens we will do our part to make the flag stand in fact for what it stands IN THEORY FOR OUR RIGHTS, FOR ALL OUR RIGHTS, AND FOR NOTHING BUT OUR RIGHTS.

To maintain this end we must place in power men who sympathize with American ideals, who recognize the standing of the United States among nations today, who will assert and maintain our national dignity, and who will ceaselessly labor to keep the nation in a state of preparedness to resist affront, aggression or attack.

The United States is not an aggressor nation. The wars upon which it has embarked have come against our will. The total lack of preparedness which has attended our entrance upon each of these conflicts is equally a proof of our peaceful intent, and of the fact that national weakness never yet averted war.

But in each of these wars we suffered sorely because of the indifference to our military and naval needs, from which today we are just awakening.

In the contest with Great Britain in 1812 our coast was harried and our capital burned because we had neither ships nor trained men to protect them.

What this unpreparedness meant for our young nation is thus summarized by General Emery Upton in his masterly book on "The Military Policy of the United States":

> Less than 5,000 men for the period of two years brought war and desolation into our territory and successfully withstood the misapplied power of 7,000,000 of people.

In the Mexican war, months were wasted in preparing for effective warfare, and untrained men were enlisted by the thousands, when one-third their number, had they been drilled and under arms at the outset, would have served. A long war and a longer pension roll were the penalties we paid for unpreparedness in 1845.

Had Spain been anything save a decrepit and declining power in 1898, the history of the war for the freedom of Cuba wouldn't be so pleasant reading. It is not wholly glorious. While our navy proved adequate to the test it actually encountered, it would have been wholly inadequate had a single power come to the aid of Spain.

That Sampson was denied authority to repeat at Santiago Dewey's exploit at Manila Bay was due wholly to the fact that diplomatic possibilities made it unsafe for the United States to risk a single battleship.

If our navy was weak, our army was weaker. Transport service, the distribution of rations and ammunition, the very arming of the troops, all bore witness to a state of utter unpreparedness. Never were so many soldiers enlisted to do the work of so few.

But even had war with a third power come, we ought to have been able to prosecute it with the swiftness that is merciful, to have equipped our soldiers as the young lives they patriotically offered to their country merited, and to have reduced enormously the cost in lives and treasure of a conflict into which only considerations of humanity ever dragged the United States.

On Flag Day it is well for us to read the future in the lessons of the past. We can thus see that the policy of indifference to naval and military efficiency has brought us close to the brink of national disaster, and imposed on us more than one serious national humiliation.

Yet, perhaps, never in the past have we faced a more menacing situation than we face today, and never have we been proportionately worse equipped to face it.

The war on the seas has thus far shown the prime efficiency and the vital importance of battle cruisers and submarines. Of the former we have none; of the latter only one today in condition to take the sea.

The war on land has shown heavy field guns, unlimited quantities of ammunition and numbers of aircraft to be the controlling factors.

We have no heavy mobile field guns; all our ammunition would not last three-quarters of an hour in such fighting as has been done in Flanders or Galicia and we have but twenty-three aeroplanes, mostly antiquated, and without pilots enough for even so inadequate a fleet.

And so as a nation we profess to reverence our flag, while too indifferent or too niggardly to furnish the means to defend it and what it stands for.

We have never failed to find men to die for the flag, but year after year we fail to take such reasonable action that men may live for it and maintain the high ideals for which it stands.

Once-Overs

Don't worry over that task you have to do tomorrow.

Don't waste your rest and breathing spell in picturing what may happen if you fail to meet requirements.

Use your thought in formulating the course which you feel will make it possible for you to win out.

Have more confidence in yourself.

One reason so many men are unsuccessful is that they worry over the hard problems of tomorrow till they are in such a state of nervousness that they can't tackle the job properly when they do come to it.

Other men have succeeded in similar undertakings. Their success you will find was a matter of concentration, determination, industry and self-reliance. That's what you need as well.

Don't worry. Get busy.

JUNE—

Oh, poets sing of roses in the leafy month of June—
A month that was invented to rhyme with "spoon" and "moon"—
And lovers in its moonlight stroll through bosky dales and dells.
And every time their glances meet they think of wedding bells.
They think no thinks of butcher bills, their eyes in love-looks bent;
They think of lips and kisses, with ne'er a think of rent—
A time that's full of poesy, a most romantic month,
With poets rhyming, joy bells chiming, right through from June the [illegible].

Oh, June it may be merry, but the bravest bloke turns pale
When the copperplate announcements clutter up his morning mail.
"What can I give the Johnsons and the Jacksons and the Jinks?"
So thinks the wretched bachelor, and thinks and thinks and thinks.
He thinks of books and pictures, of linen and a clock,
But most he thinks of ways and means, and what he'll have to hock;
And after all his thinking he and twenty other loons,
With reason reeling, bankrolls peeling, pick out a dozen spoons.

But let us not be cynics, when a rusty pen like this
In June is scratching verses which end with "bliss" and "kiss."
No, let us sing the beauty of the pinkly-blushing bride,
And the white-clad little maidens who go tripping by her side;
Let us limn her giggling sisters, her parents, pleased and proud,
The wedding dress, the flowers, the music and the crowd,
Good-byes and tears, old shoes and rice, and—there! we've left no room
To say a single—in this here jingle—word about the groom.

We'll let you off this time; you didn't omit anything that matters enormously.—Editor.

Gertrude Atherton

Tells How a Girl May Succeed as an Author

Compiled by Ethel Lloyd Patterson

Mrs. Atherton is unquestionably one of the foremost women novelists of today. Her latest novel, "Perch of the Devil," has been as widely read as any American fiction of recent years.

No. 2—TRAINING

IN my opinion every girl who wished to earn her living by writing should have experience. That experience is work on the staff of a newspaper. If I had a daughter of my own who wished to write, no matter how great her natural endowment for such a career, I would, nevertheless, suggest to her that at least one year in newspaper work was an essential foundation of her development.

Nor do I mean it is the "Special Article" or "Feature" or "Interview" which is of real importance. It is the everyday assignment which any city editor will give to any girl working upon his staff that affords the experience she needs. Weddings, funerals, social events and women's club meetings, police courts, political meetings, attend them; write of them all and look at each with understanding, interested eyes.

Of course the pay for such work, especially in small towns, is not good. And unless one is young and full of enthusiasm, it may seem very like drudgery. I believe the best recompense for which a girl may hope in general reporting is from twelve to fifteen dollars a week on the staff of the smaller out-of-town papers and from twenty to thirty dollars a week on one of the large city papers. But, after all, the way to success in literature (as in any art) is long and hard at best. A girl might as well learn from the first to school herself financially as well as mentally, for any girl who wishes to write must have self-control from the moment she gets her first assignment on the staff of a newspaper and cultivate it for the rest of her existence.

Working hours on a newspaper are strange and upsetting to any one accustomed to a normal life. One learns to eat when one can and sleep many days and be awake many nights. There are few enough women in newspaper work, and so the girl in journalism will find most of her companionship in the society of men. Every opportunity will be afforded her to get at "loose ends," to become unconventional in manner, careless of speech and dress, careless of the accepted standards of work and of society. She who comes through these experiences must have self-reliance, true dignity and the ability to work, to stick to her work in a womanlike way and to regard it as a profession and not as an outlet to temperamental hysteria.

Second only in importance to newspaper work in the training of the girl who would write for her living is the opportunity for broadening intellectually afforded in foreign travel. Of course I know the average person will protest at once that travel is only for the rich. This is not true. In our day and age there is no earthly reason why an American girl should not see any country in the world she wishes to see on, practically, a "shoestring." There are slow boats, and "second cabin" travel has become as comfortable as "first cabin." If a girl, when she arrives in the country she wishes to see, cannot afford to ride, she certainly can afford to walk. One may travel third class or one may tramp through England, Germany, France, Switzerland or Italy and live like a queen on about a dollar a day.

For to the girl who wishes to write the minds of all men must be as an open book. The more people she meets and learns to understand the better will she be able to portray the one type of the moment. And the more a girl sees of other countries the better will she understand (and like) her own.

We must remember that a girl's life is naturally sheltered. Seldom normally do girls get life at every angle as do young men. And to write one must have experience. It is for this reason I also would urge every girl who wishes to become an author to accept as many social invitations as possible. The point in writing is not to crawl away by yourself and work, but to get out into the world and let life start your brain working for you. You cannot be narrow if you are going to write; you must be tolerant. You cannot imagine a type; you must know it. You cannot read a geography for the background of your story—you must have been in the very spot you describe. At the same time you must reconcile yourself to long, hard hours of work alone.

Science for Workers

By Edgar Lucien Larkin

Q.—"What is polarized light?"—ARSEN YERETZIAN.

A.—To answer this question as it should be would occupy one editorial page of the AMERICAN, since it is one of the most intricate problems in the entire range of science. I have often experimented with the gorgeous displays of polarized light colors before classes; but explanation is, indeed, difficult and complex. The shortest definition is vibration of waves of light in one plane. Dull red waves are of such length that 33,000 are included in a train one inch long, and dim violet 63,000 to the inch. Tie a rope to a wall at one end and hold the other in the hand; stand from five to ten feet away and shake the rope violently. Then crude waves will appear to travel in the rope from hand to wall. Move the hand rapidly in every possible direction between horizontal and perpendicular, and the waves will imitate the motions of the hand. But suddenly move the hand entirely in one plane, the waves will all be in one plane. They are said to be polarized.

Polarized light presents strange properties in comparison with natural white light from the sun. Iceland spar and tourmaline have marked polarization powers. Spar doubly refracts incident light and produces two images. The atoms or molecules within produce this remarkable effect. A number of other crystals have this property. Mineral salts appear in gorgeous colors in polarized light, especially if in the field of view of a microscope. Chlorate of potassium is an example, giving colors of great beauty, and more if rotated in the polarized radiation. Light can be polarized by reflection from polished surfaces nearly as well as by refraction in passing through transparent crystals. Thus, I have a double reflection polariscope up here to attach to the telescope in viewing the sun. It makes the light less brilliant than the original and not injurious to the eyes. Nicol prisms of Iceland spar are used as analyzers to detect polarization of light. Polariscopes are in active commercial use by the government in custom houses in testing syrups or solutions of sugar. Tourmaline and quartz possess marked polarization properties. I have experimented for hours at a time with the wonders of polarized light, always fascinated with the splendor of a color gorgeous and beautiful beyond any description by use of words.

The Woman in the Case

By S. E. Kiser

WHAT'S the first thing people say when a man goes wrong?
There is one conclusion they who make up the throng
Always straightway come to when any man goes tumbling down—
When he robs his fellow-men, when the ones who praised him frown—
When his honor and his pride end in bitterness and shame,
All his former friends decide that some woman was to blame.

WHEN a man has risen high, when he wins applause,
Do the people reason why, do they guess the cause?
Do they tell each other then that some woman made him great,
That for her, with sword or pen, toiling early, striving late,
He had will and strength to win, casting every doubt aside?
Why blame woman for the sin if the virtue is denied?
